I completely support solar projects. We can imagine that in a few decades, wind and solar power will be our main sources of electricity. I also imagine that the technology will continue to change and improve and current panels will become obsolete and an environmental concern.

Mostly, what I want to do is to implore you to avoid using forested land for solar projects. Given the importance of trees in our environment, and all the alternative options for solar installation, we have no excuse to be cutting forests. Lowland highway medians seem like reasonable options as do warehouse and mall rooftops.

Thank you for soliciting public response,
