Massachusetts Has It All!

To all Recreational Fishermen and Divers,

The Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries is proud to present you with this year's edition of our Saltwater Recreational Fishing Guide. The Recreational Fisheries Program's Staff has worked hard to bring you this year's issue. But the Guide has a long successful history, it has been a traditional publication of our Agency for over 20 years.

The Recreational Fishing Guide is designed to provide basic information about the Commonwealth's recreational fishing opportunities. It is a useful tool for the novice or visiting angler to become acquainted with what Massachusetts has to offer, although many long-time resident anglers call for it regularly.

And what we have to offer is hard to beat! Massachusetts is long-famous for record-size striped bass and currently has the largest and most successful recreational striped bass fishery in the country. This single resource is the backbone of our marine recreational fishing industry. Aside from stripers, our state offers diversity throughout its 1,800 mile coastline. In past years, as many as 70 different species of fish have been identified in our recreational catch, including record catches of giant bluefin tuna, flounder, cod, bluefish, tautog and scup.

The total economic activity generated by the Commonwealth's marine recreational fishing industry is enormous, reaching in the area of $1 billion annually. This economy is driven by high participation levels. About 800,000 anglers each year take to our marine waters to fish, with over 40% composed of visitors from other states and countries.

Funding for this guide and much of the Division's Recreational Fisheries Program is provided by the most effective "user-pays, user-benefits" program in the nation – The Sport Fish Restoration Act (Wallop-Breaux) – where anglers and boaters provide vital financial support for state fisheries management, boating access, and other related programs. This federal law levies a manufacturer's excise tax on fishing tackle, fish-finders and electric trolling motors as well as import duties on tackle and boats. Revenues are directed to a national fund, the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund, which is administered by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service for distribution to the states.

We hope you find this year's Recreational Fishing Guide to be a useful tool. Happy fishing and protect your resources – learn the laws that govern your sport, return undersized or unwanted catch carefully back to the water, and remember to respect the marine environment to ensure future years of enjoyment.

Sincerely,

Paul J. Diodati
Director

Recreational Fishing Information

Permits are not required for recreational saltwater angling, however, a commercial permit is required when any fish are sold.

Recreational Shellfishing is permitted in designated clean areas and regulated by the individual towns. Contact your town department of Natural Resources for local regulations and permit acquisition.

Recreational Spearfishing while diving does not require a permit.

Recreational Crab Fishing allows up to 50 crabs for family use per day taken by methods other than potting. No permit needed.

Recreational Lobster Fishing requires a non-commercial lobster permit and holders are limited to 10 pots. Permits available only to Mass. residents and non-residents who own real estate in Mass. If diving , a recreational lobster permit endorsed for diving is needed.

Bait Nets: A person may use a small net of no more than 200 square feet inside many of the bays and estuaries of the Commonwealth for the sole purpose of obtaining bait fish for personal use. Use of larger nets requires a special permit. Contact DMF for details.

These rules apply in all coastal waters of the Commonwealth which are all waters within the rise and fall of the tide extending out to three miles from an established coastal baseline and include all the waters of Massachusetts Bay, Cape Cod Bay, and Nantucket Sound. These rules do not include the waters within or above any fish-ladder or dam, nor the waters above any tidal boundary established by the Department of Environmental Protection in streams flowing to the sea.

Prohibitions

No discarding of legal size dead striped bass. Fish must be transported with head, body and tail intact to allow for measurement.

Snagging, Snatching of Anadromous Fish: including shad, smelt, white perch, striped bass, trout, salmon, and river herring is prohibited.

The taking of Atlantic Salmon, Sturgeon, all marine mammals, all sea turtles and the Diamondback terrapin from Massachusetts waters is prohibited.

To take crabs by pot without a permit is prohibited.

Selling fish without a commercial permit is prohibited.

Other Notes:

Minimum Size Limits are measured as a straight line from the anterior most point of the fish with the mouth closed to the tip of the tail. Tail may be squeezed together for the final measurement. Exceptions: Billfish are measured from the lower jaw to the tail fork. Black sea bass tail filament is not included.

Tuna: Atlantic Tuna are regulated by the federal government. Tuna management is based at: National Marine Fisheries Service Atlantic Tunas Program, Northeast Regional Office, Gloucester, MA 01930-2298. Tel #:(978)-281-9344. Call or write for further information.

Tagging - Periodically the Division conducts tagging studies of a particular finfish species to develop a better understanding of local movements, habitat preference, migration, growth, and general abundance. The angler plays a significant role in retrieving valuable data. Carefully examine your catch for tags. If found, record the tag number if returning fish to water, or snip off the tag if keeping fish. Contact the address printed on the tag and you will be briefed on the tagging study and may even receive a reward. Note: Recently, striped bass, black sea bass, and tautog have been tagged in our waters. The Division participates in federal tagging programs as well. Some large, long-term tagging programs are carried out by the following organizations:

U.S. Fish & Wildlife,	1825 Virginia Ave., Annapolis, MD 1-800-448-8322

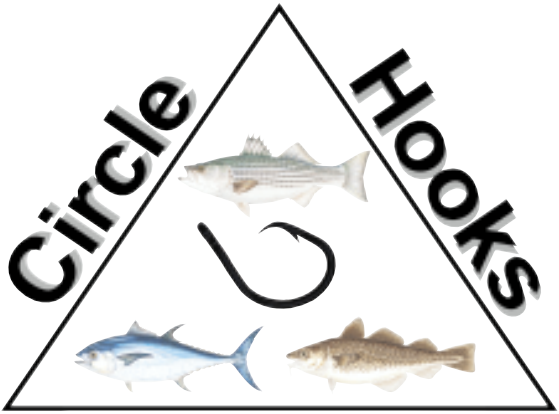
"Massachusetts saltwater fishing is one of the finest outdoor recreational activities in the country. Let's continue to enjoy and value our natural resources."



Save Fish

As part of our role in the active management of marine fisheries resources, and the desire to reduce unnecessary waste of those resources, the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries is actively encouraging the use of circle hooks. We promote their use in fisheries that use baited hooks for the capture of striped bass, tunas, and other species where they can effectively reduce the mortality of released fish. This advice is based upon findings of research done by our own biologists and other researchers.

An example of a fishery where circle hooks can have a big impact is our local striped bass fishery. Massachusetts' anglers annually catch and release millions of striped bass. An estimated 8% of those fish are lost to the population by mortality associated with that practice.

Two recent DMF research projects focused on the use of circle hooks when using bait for striped bass and tunas. In those experiments circle hooks showed a reduction in the rate of potential lethal wounding, and subsequent mortality. Estimates of lethal wounding were approximately 1.6 % for circle hooks and 27.5 % for j-hooks. Obviously, a considerable difference with circle hooks. Other researchers have had similar results.

Researchers have also estimated the effectiveness of circle hooks to hook fish that took natural baits. Results indicate that circle hooks catch slightly more fish than j- hooks. Even untended rods caught fish.

Because of the clear advantages of the use of circle hooks we strongly enourage their use by anglers. We also recommend that anglers learn more about how these hooks can benefit all fisheries resources.

Catch & Release

Why release the fish you just caught? Well, it could be that the fish is a sublegal size, you've already caught your bag limit, you may prefer a different species to eat or you just want to enjoy the thrill of reeling in a fish. For whatever the reason, it's important to know how to properly handle your catch so that there's a good chance for survival once released back into the water.

Here are a few tips:

❖ If fishing with bait use circle hooks.

❖ If fishing with artificials, flatten the hook barb with a pair of pliers or file down the barb.

❖ Be attentive and set the hook immediately to prevent the fish from swallowing the hook. Setting the hook is not necessary with circle hooks.

❖ Reduce the play time. The longer the fish fights, the higher the stress level for the fish, which reduces the chances for recovery.

❖ If possible, leave the fish in the water while removing the hook. If you need to bring the fish on shore or into a boat, first wet your hands or use a wet rag when handling the fish. To help calm the fish, place a wet rag over it's eyes. Avoid dropping the fish on deck/shore or letting the fish thrash against any hard surfaces.

❖ If the fish has swallowed the hook, DO NOT FORCEFULLY REMOVE THE HOOK. Cut the line as close to the mouth as possible and then release the fish. In many instances the hook will rust away.

❖ Return the fish to the water head first. Revive a fatigued fish by supporting it in a swimming position in the water and gently move it back and forth until it is recovered enough to swim.

❖ Don't use the gills or eyes as a hand hold. Use the lower jaw if the fish doesn't have sharp teeth. If hooked in the gills, then use a tool (e.g. needlenose pliers) to carefully remove hook.

As you can see, it just takes a little forethought and common sense to enjoy our saltwater fisheries in a responsible manner.

Stop Aquatic Invasive Species

MarineFisheries, in cooperation with a multi-agency state/federal task force, is asking marine anglers and bait shops to help prevent the spread of harmful aquatic invasive species. These species, including a wide variety of non-indigenous plants and invertebrates, can disrupt the ecology of coastal environments by out-competing and displacing native species, or infecting them with diseases for which they have no resistance. Many serious shellfish predators and diseases, including the green crab and MSX, were introduced accidentally. Others, including plants and algae such as Codium, have been detached from the hulls of ships, or discharged with bilge water. In addition to these incidental introductions, many species are intentionally imported for use in Massachusetts waters. Live baits, such as shellfish, sea worms, and finfish are shipped here from other states and countries. The bait organisms themselves are potential problems, but, more importantly, their packaging, bedding materials and any associated water may contain invasive species, including algae, invertebrates such as crabs, and microorganisms.

The following are some simple steps you can take to prevent the introduction and spread of potentially damaging aquatic invasive species:

- Carefully remove all plant material from boats and trailers before leaving a launching ramp.
- Dispose of all unused bait and bait packing materials in a trash receptacle upon returning from your outing. Unused bait should never be discarded in a waterway.
- Avoid transporting live shellfish or shellfish waste between water bodies. All shellfish material should be disposed of in an appropriate land-side receptacle.

By exercising these minimal precautions, you can help ensure the viability of the coastal habitats and nursery areas that support your favorite sport fish, and help keep access sites clean. For more information on this issue, please visit www.NortheastANS.org.

The Massachusetts Clean Vessel Act (CVA) Program

The Massachusetts Clean Vessel Act (CVA) Program is funded through the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's Sportfish Restoration Fund and has been underway since 1994. To date, over $7,000,000 has been awarded to pumpout facilities for equipment, operation, and maintenance costs and over 2,000,000 gallons of waste have been removed from recreational boats. For more information about the program or to report any problems, call Vin Malkoski at 508-910-6316 or Tom Beaulieu at 617-626-1525. For a full list of Pumpout facilities visit:
