Focusing on
District Attorney (DA) Diversion at the Core of Decreasing Juvenile Detention in Suffolk County:

Juvenile diversion programs have been incorporated into many district attorney's offices across Massachusetts. Opportunities for diversion are important for young people as they provide alternatives to formally processing a youth, can reduce the stigma of being detained, and can promote healthy, pro-social development to assist with youth's desistance from delinquent behavior. Massachusetts' JDAI Counties are working diligently to provide diversion opportunities, resulting in a reduction of detained youth. Suffolk County diversion program has been a success story and their work will be highlighted in today's quarterly.

Presentations include:

Highlighting Suffolk County's Diversion Program

Mike Glennon, Assistant District Attorney
Nicole Robbins, Juvenile Diversion Coordinator
