

DFSRegs

From: Jonathan Vallely
Sent: Friday, November 27, 2015 11:28 AM
To: DFSRegs
Subject: DFS regulations

Dear Office of Attorney General,

As a 20 year old college student, I want to voice my concern over the proposed daily fantasy regulations. As a skill based game my friends and I often play DFS for fun with the potential to win cash prizes. Now my ability to participate in DFS is being challenged based off my age alone. As a 20 year old I am juggling college as well as a part time job and consider myself very fiscally responsible. In the regulations it seems that your office is arguing that minors between the age of 18-21 are incapable of managing their own finances and are not responsible enough to play DFS. Which I strongly disagree with, as many of peers including myself are more than capable of playing DFS responsibly. With that being said I also find it troubling that our State lottery system allows players under 21. So by your logic the state has the right to profit off of gambling (which involves no skill) but a private organization who's product involves knowledge and skill in order to win will become overly regulated. In conclusion I request that you drop all regulations preventing the use of DFS for minors under the age of 21 and permit advertising on college campuses.

Thank you,
Jonathan Vallely