barrier beach stretches for more than four miles along Ipswich Bay and is separated from the mainland by Essex Bay and the Essex and Ipswich River estuaries. The reservation includes a variety of other habitats, including a drumlin (known as Castle Hill), shrub thickets, cranberry bogs, salt marsh, dunes, and forests.

The reservation is open year-round, from 8:00 a.m. to sunset. An admission fee is charged to enter the reservation and varies depending on the season. In the summer, rangers and lifeguards are on duty at the beach, and bathhouses and a refreshment stand are open. A shaded picnic area is also available.

The 59-room Great House on Castle Hill was built in the mid-1920s by Chicago manufacturer Richard Telle Crane, Jr. It is open to the public for house tours on Tuesday afternoons from May through October and by appointment or for seasonal concerts and events. The Castle Hill grounds are also open to the public, except when the property is reserved for special events. Admission fees are charged for tours and grounds visits.

CHOATE HOUSE ON HOG ISLAND

The 680-acre Crane Wildlife Refuge is located in the Essex River estuary, shoreward of Cranes Beach. It includes part of Castle Neck, five islands, and salt marsh along the Castle Neck River. Though concentrations are largest during spring and fall migrations, wildlife use the estuary year-round. Some 180 species of birds have been seen there.

Foot trails on Long Island and Hog Island lead to a visitor center, the 250-year-old Choate House on top of Hog Island. An admission fee is charged. The Trustees provide scheduled boat tours to the island, which is also accessible via private boat.

PLEASE NOTE: Despite extensive quality control efforts, individual ownership of all parcels has not been independently verified. CZM makes no representations or warranties with respect to the definitiveness of the private or public ownership data presented in the Coast Guide. All issues related to questions of ownership of coastal property should be investigated at the local Registry of Deeds. In addition, while information about parking and available facilities for each site was checked in 2000, changes may have occurred since that time. Please look for parking signs and check with site owners for updated information as necessary.
