

Irrigation Systems for Urban Farms

with Curtis Stone

Author of The Urban Farmer

Irrigation layout

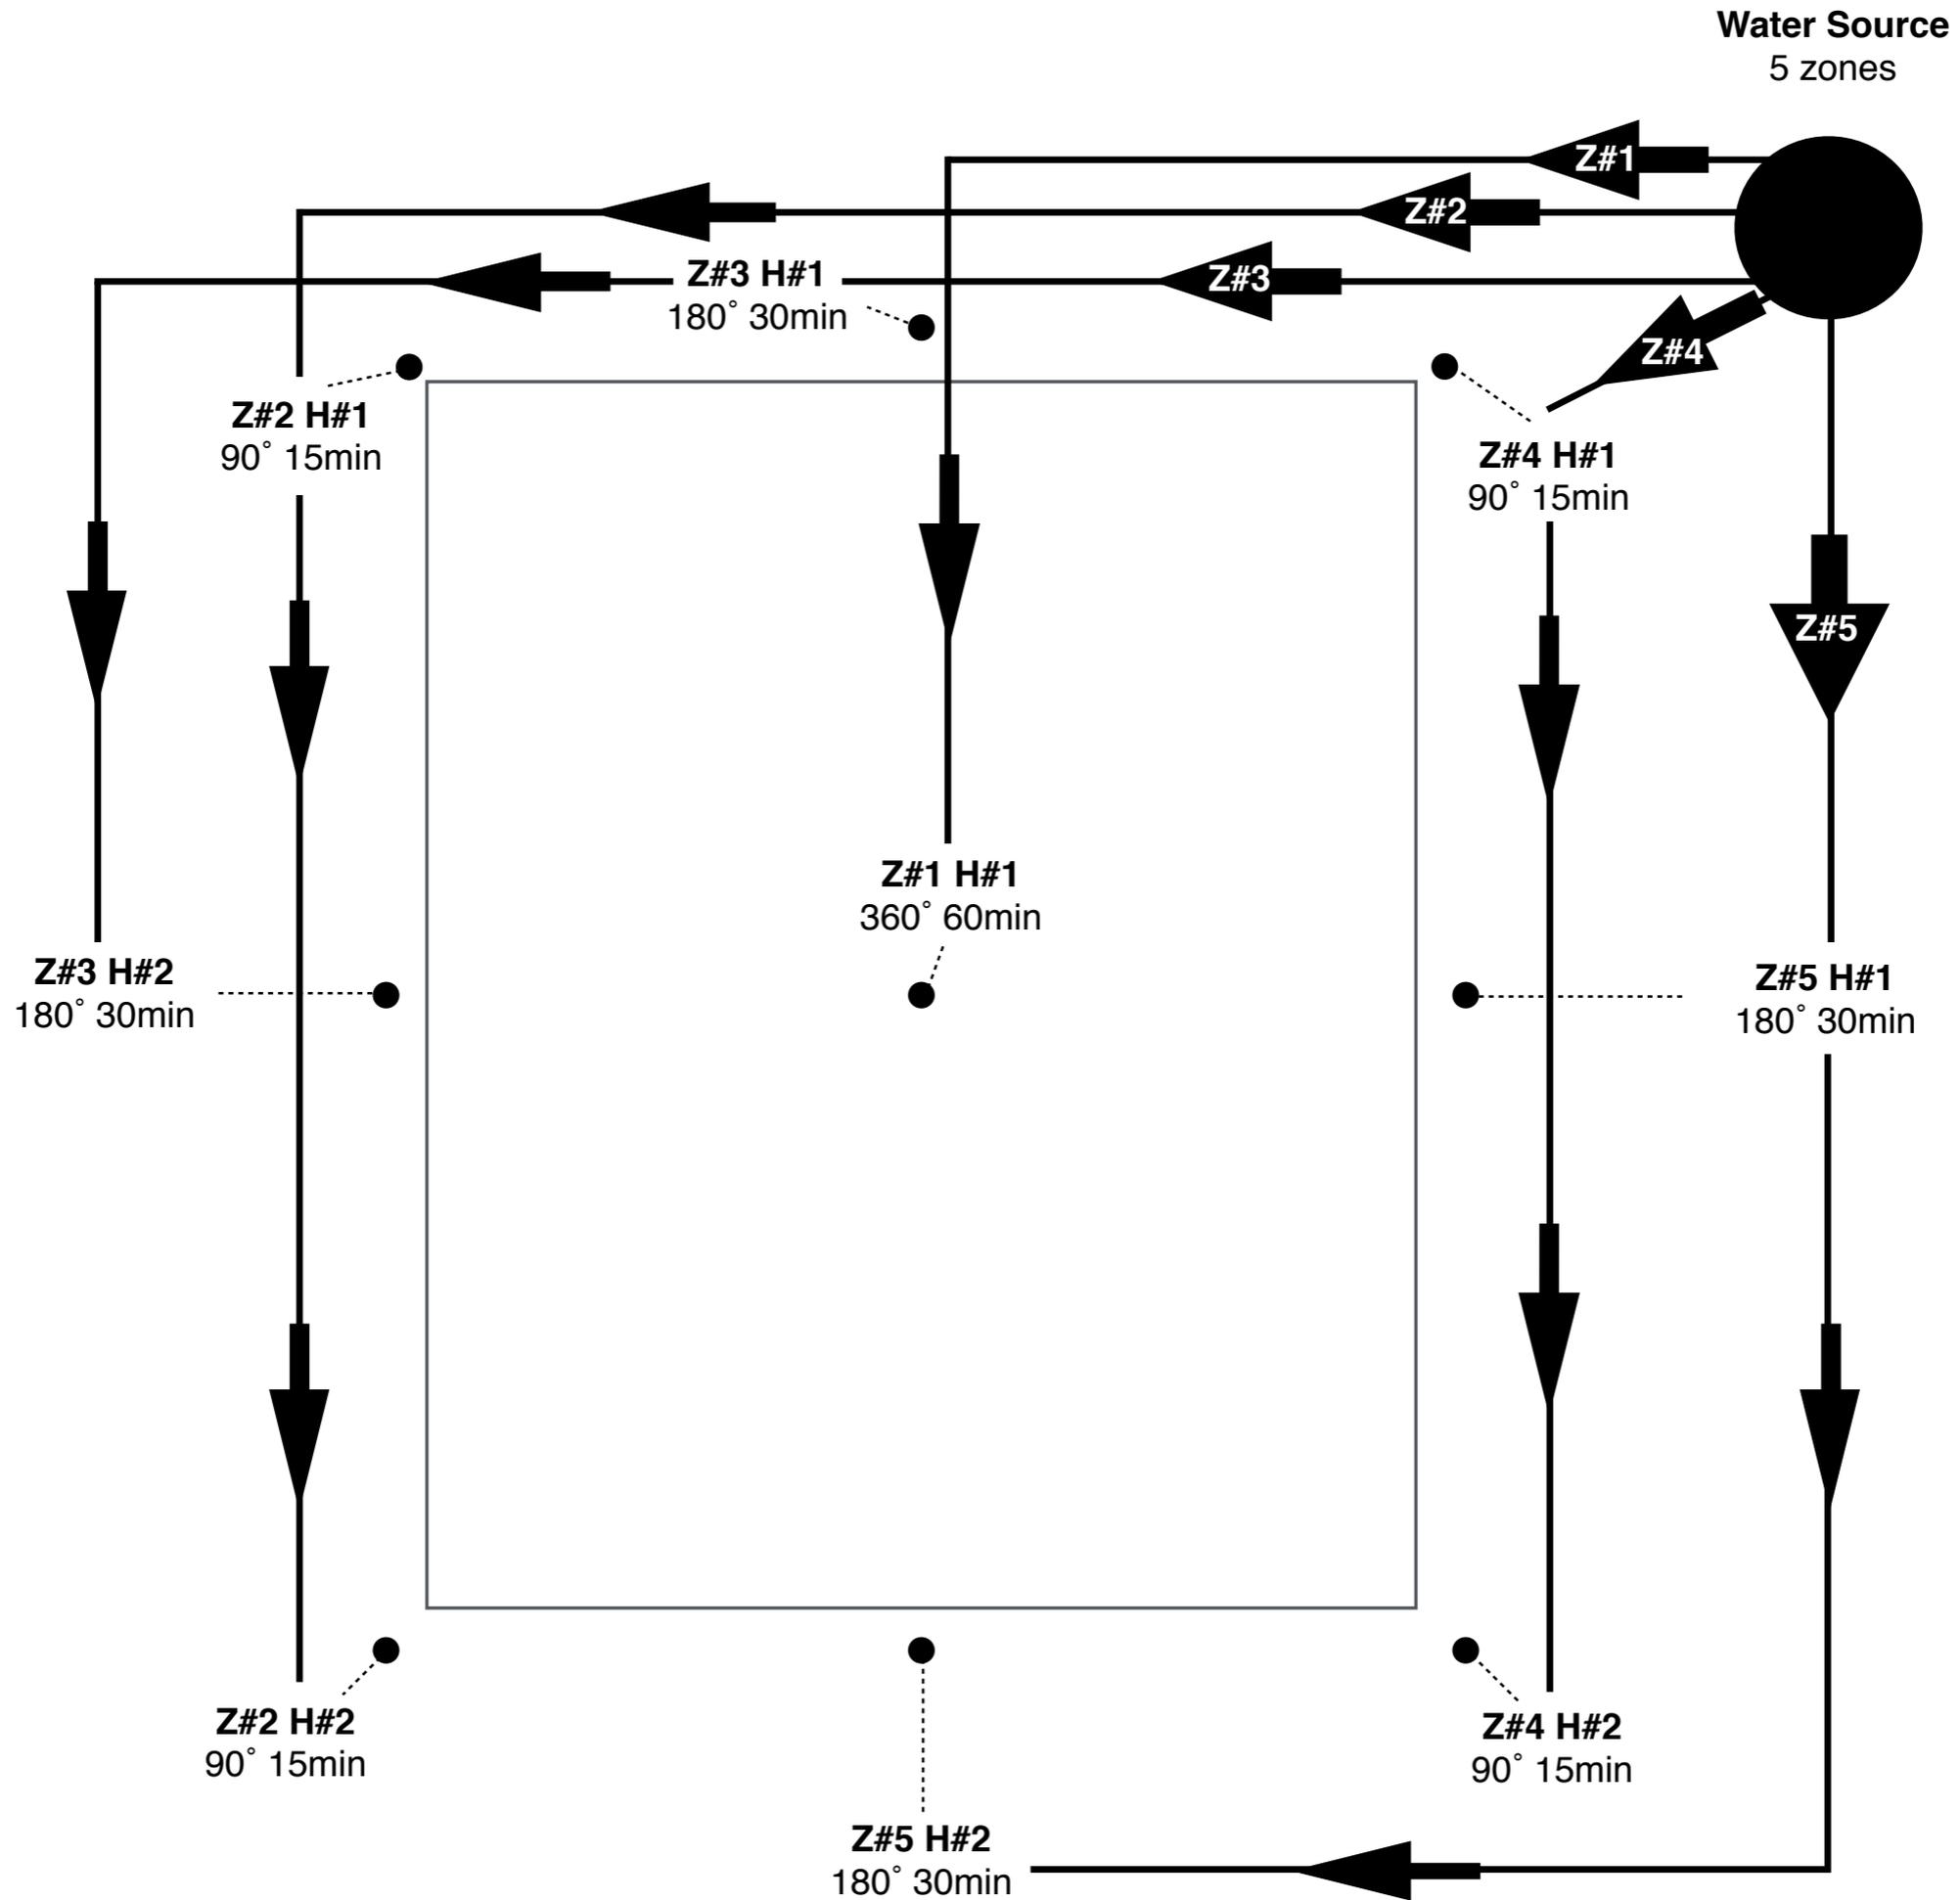

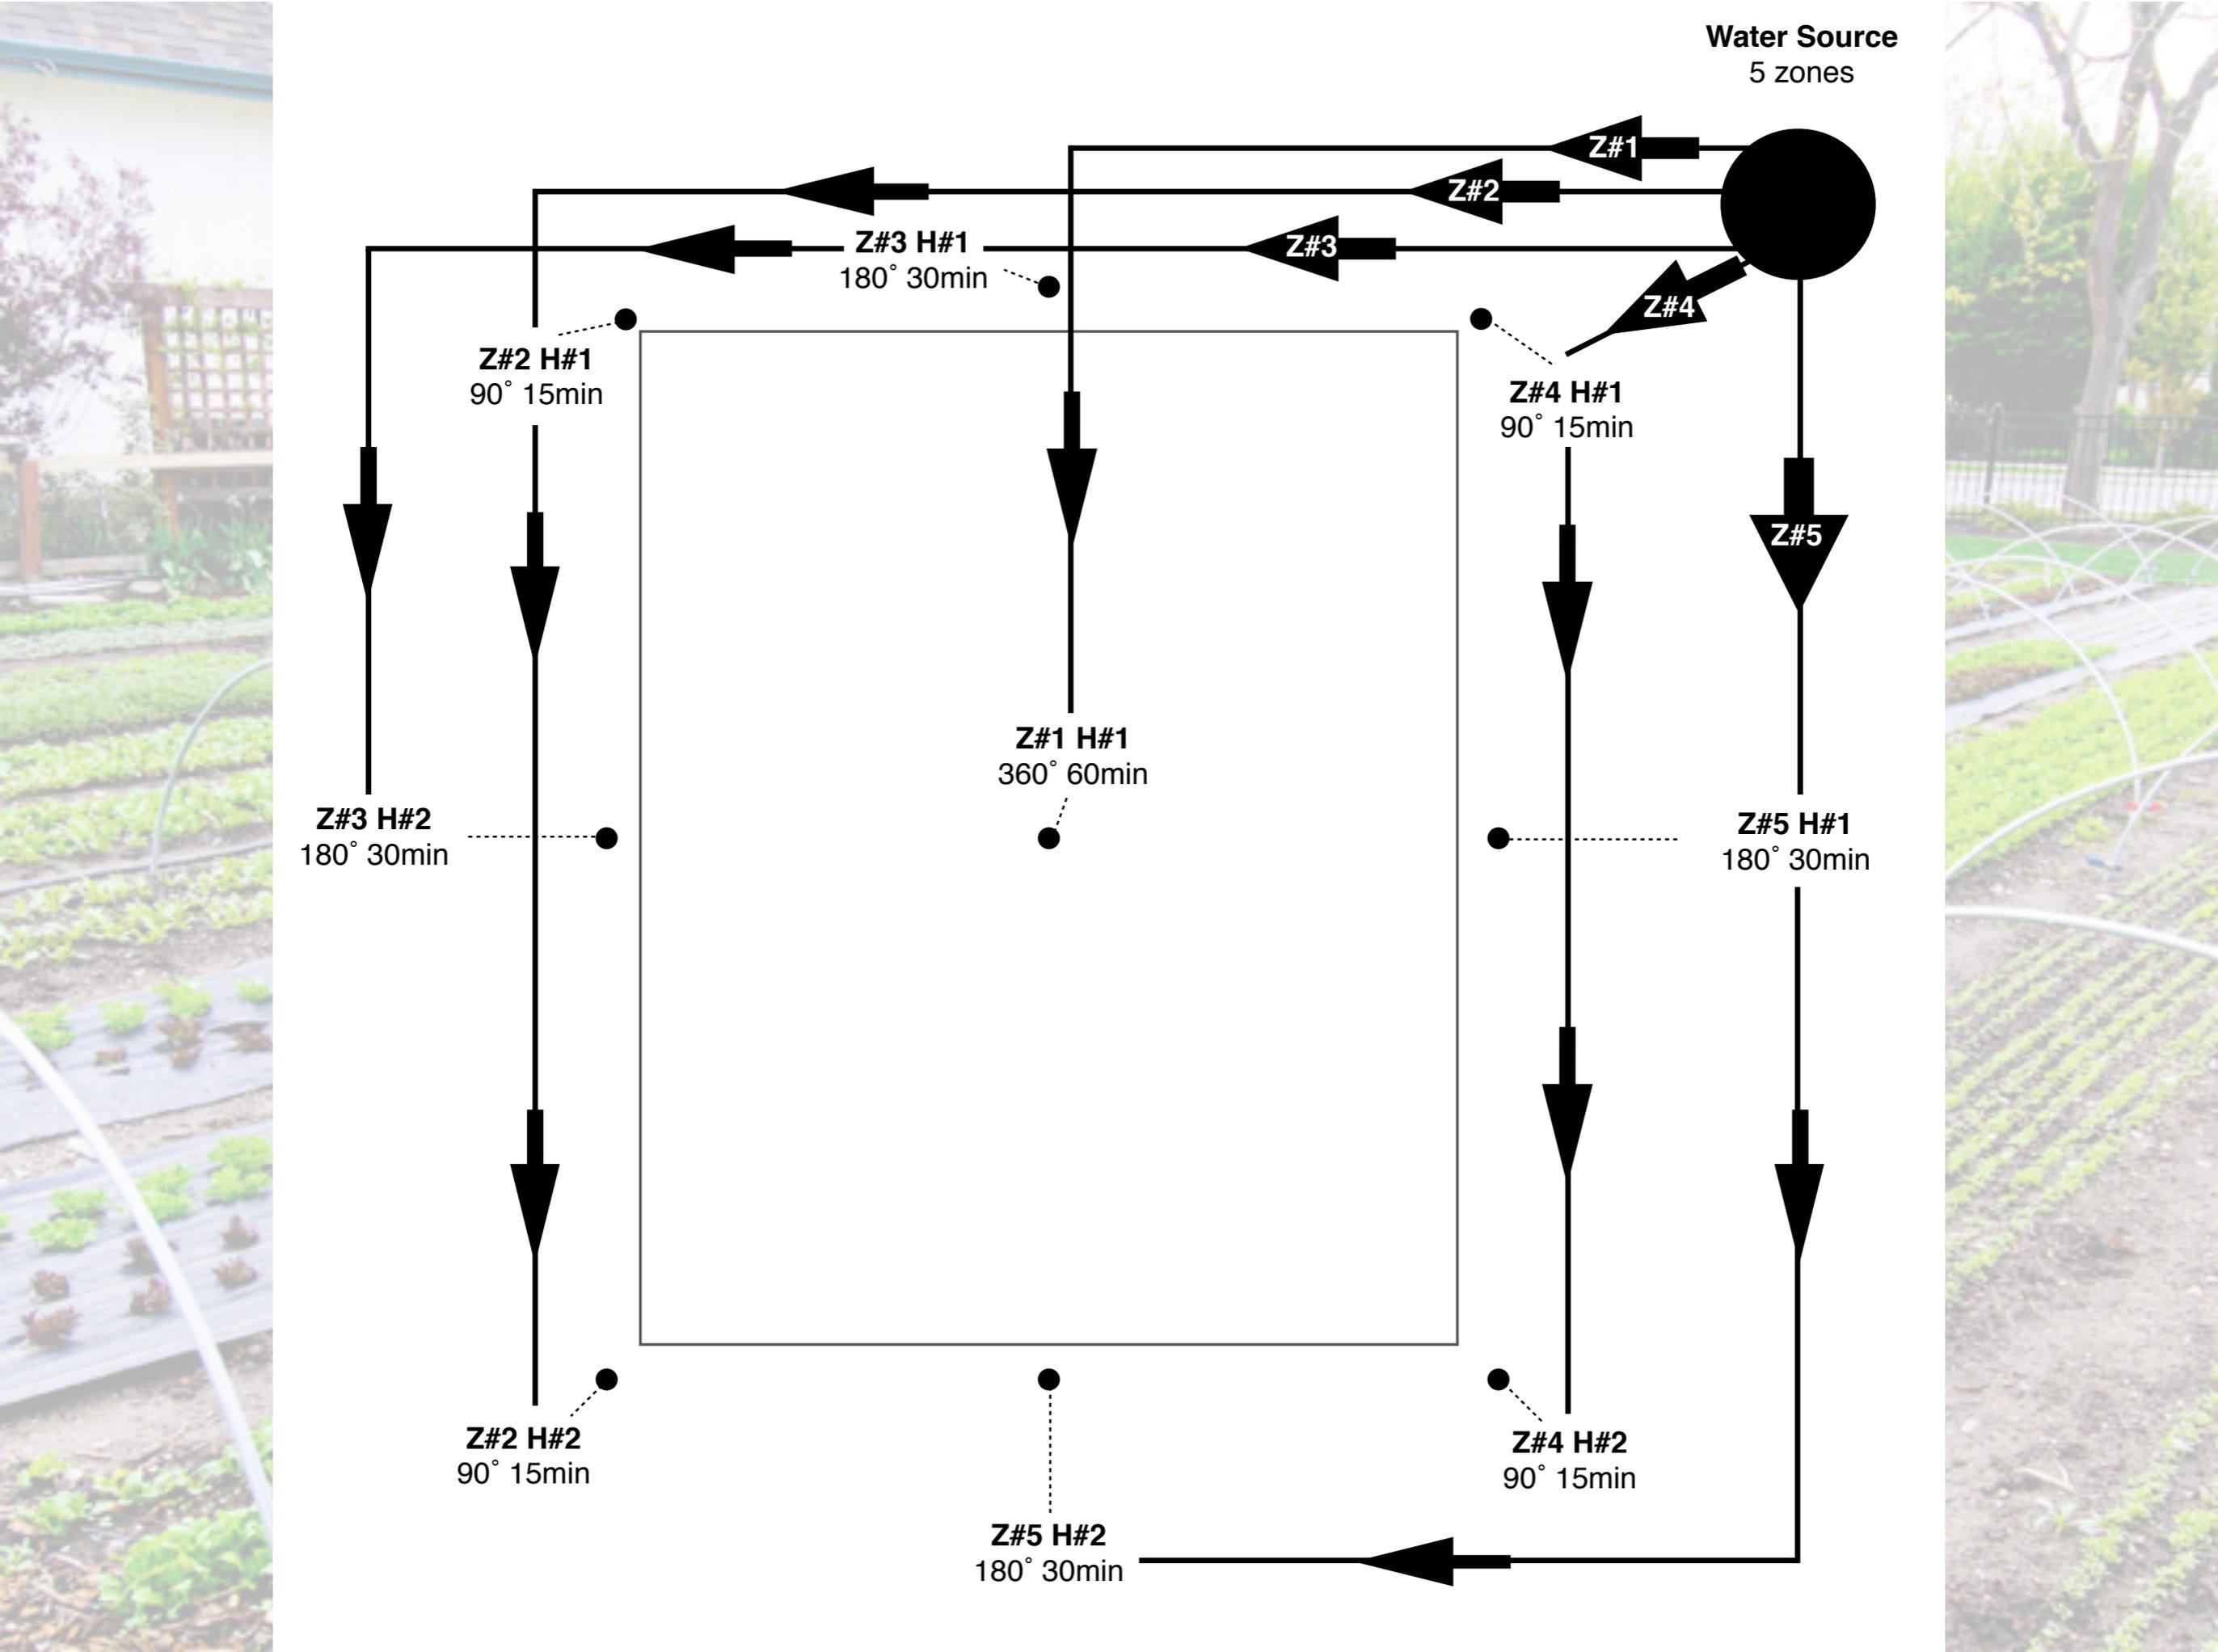

An aerial photograph of a rectangular agricultural field. The field is divided into five distinct zones by two vertical strips of blue plastic mulch. Each zone contains several parallel rows of young green plants. The field is bordered by a dense green hedge on the left and a line of trees on the right. In the background, a long, narrow greenhouse with a translucent covering is visible. The text '5 zone system' is overlaid in the center of the image.

5 zone system

A long, arched greenhouse with a curved metal frame and a translucent plastic covering. The interior is filled with rows of young green plants, likely seedlings, growing in dark soil. A drip irrigation system is visible, with several white emitters hanging from the ceiling. The perspective is from one end of the greenhouse, looking down the length of the structure.
