

Massachusetts Community Health Center Dental Program Directory

Massachusetts Department of Public Health
Office of Oral Health
July 2012

INTRODUCTION

The first community health center in the United States was established in Boston, Massachusetts in 1965, and is known today as the Geiger-Gibson Community Health Center. Community health centers are programs developed by the residents of a community to provide culturally and linguistically responsive comprehensive and coordinated primary care to community residents regardless of their ability to pay. Many community health centers in Massachusetts also provide dental care as part of their primary care health services.

While the City of Boston established free dental programs for children as early as 1916, the first health center dental program was developed in the late 1960's. Today there are more than 50 community health centers and satellites providing comprehensive dental services statewide. In 2010, these health centers had more than 381,000 dental patient visits. Community health centers accept most forms of insurance, including MassHealth, Commonwealth Care, Health Safety Net, as well as private insurances. A sliding-fee schedule is also available for those residents who are low income.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health Office of Oral Health has developed this comprehensive directory of community health center dental programs to help improve access for residents of the state who may have difficulty obtaining dental services.
