Abstract

During 1986 there were 20,321 disciplinary reports issued involving 4,457 different individuals. This bulletin contains a statistical description of these disciplinary reports including: reporting institution, offense, finding, sanction and characteristics of the offenders incurring the reports. Some highlights of the findings in this bulletin are:

- There were 20,321 disciplinary reports issued in 1986. This represents an increase of 6 percent (N=1200) over the 19,121 disciplinary reports written in 1985.
- The number of disciplinary reports written in 1986 ranged from 31 at Medfield to 9,577 at Cedar Junction. Two facilities (Cedar Junction and Norfolk) accounted for 61 percent of all reports.
- Over half of the individuals (52 percent) in the DOC during 1986 incurred one or more disciplinary reports. Among the 4,457 offenders who received at least one disciplinary report, the number of disciplinary reports incurred ranged from one to 93 and the median for this group was two.
- Seventy-five percent of the disciplinary reports were classified as major, 25 percent as minor, and less than one percent were referred to the District Attorney.
- Of the 31 offenses involved in disciplinary reports, the three most frequently cited were: number 2, violating rules; number 1, disobeying, lying or insolence; and number 8, disrupting order.
- Sixty-five percent of all disciplinary reports resulted in a guilty finding.
- The most common sanctions imposed were isolation time, extra work, room restriction, and loss of privileges.
- Eighty-seven percent of all sanctions were invoked and 13 percent were suspended.
- Eight percent of all disciplinary report findings were appealed.

DISCIPLINARY REPORTS ISSUED IN THE
MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTION,
1986

Introduction

Inmates in the custody of the Department of Correction (DOC) can receive disciplinary reports for a variety of behavioral infractions. A hearing is held on each disciplinary report and a finding is issued. In some cases, sanctions are meted out and inmates can appeal the results of these disciplinary hearings.

The purpose of this bulletin is to present information on disciplinary reports written in the Department of Correction during 1986. The bulletin presents information on the disciplinary reports including: reporting institution, disciplinary offenses, findings, sanctions and appeals. The bulletin also presents information on the offenders receiving disciplinary reports, including characteristics of present offense and social background.

The information in this bulletin is derived from disciplinary report rosters submitted to the Research Division by each institution. Additional offense and social background information is derived from the computerized inmate data base. The bulletin contains information only on those disciplinary reports received by criminally sentenced inmates in the DOC and excludes any disciplinary reports incurred by women in the Awaiting Trial Unit at Framingham, by women who were civilly committed to Framingham, and by Charles Street inmates housed at Concord or Norfolk. Also excluded from the analysis are disciplinary reports that were written and subsequently reduced to incident reports. In addition, 27 disciplinary reports were excluded from the analysis. In 7 cases the disciplinary offense was unknown and in 20 cases the identity of the offender receiving the report could not be positively determined.

Number of Disciplinary Reports

During 1986 there were 20,321 disciplinary reports written in DOC facilities. The number of disciplinary reports ranged from 31 at Medfield to 9,577 at Cedar Junction. Five institutions, had more than 1,000 reports: Cedar Junction, Norfolk, South Eastern Correctional Center (SECC), Framingham, and North Central Correctional Institute (NCCI). Three institutions had between 500 and 1,000 reports: Concord, Boston State Pre-Release Center (PRC), and Shirley. Table 1 shows the number of disciplinary reports for each DOC facility.

Table 1 also shows the number of disciplinary reports written at each facility in 1984 and 1985. Overall, there was a 33 percent increase in disciplinary reports, from 15,291 in 1984 to 20,321 in 1986. There was a six percent increase from 19,121 disciplinary reports in 1985 to 20,321 in 1986.

Individual offenders can also receive multiple disciplinary reports. The 20,321 disciplinary reports written in 1986 involved 4,457 different individuals. Individuals involved in the disciplinary process during 1986 received from one to ninety-three disciplinary reports. The median number of disciplinary reports received, for individuals who received any reports, was two. There were 1,587 individuals (36 percent of all individuals receiving any reports) who received only one report during the year. There were 177 individuals who received twenty or more disciplinary reports during the year. Table 2 shows the number of disciplinary reports received by each of the 4,457 offenders involved in the disciplinary process during the year.

Not all offenders in the DOC received disciplinary reports during 1986. An estimate of the proportion of the population involved in the disciplinary process can be derived by calculating the "base population" for the particular facility or the DOC as a whole, and comparing the "base population" with the number of individuals who received disciplinary reports. The "base population" is the population at the beginning of the period plus any new admissions during the period and represents the total number of offenders served during the period.

Table 3 shows the results of this analysis. For example, Cedar Junction had 698 offenders at the beginning of the year and 2,063 offenders admitted during the year for a total of 2,761 offenders. There were 1,151 individuals involved in the disciplinary process at Cedar Junction during the year. Thus, it can be estimated that 42 percent of the population at Cedar Junction received one or more disciplinary reports during the year.

Overall, an estimated 52 percent of the offenders in the DOC during 1986 received one or more disciplinary reports during the year and 48 percent received no disciplinary reports during the same period. For individual facilities, the proportion of the population involved in the disciplinary process ranged from 6 percent at Lemuel Shattuck to 64 percent at Boston State Pre-Release Center. Because offenders are generally placed at more than one facility during the year, the proportion involved in the disciplinary process at each facility is generally lower than the proportion involved in the DOC as a whole.

* Individuals can receive disciplinary reports at more than one institution and can be admitted to more than one facility during the year. Thus, the sum of these columns are greater than the total reported for each column.

The number of disciplinary reports issued in any month ranged from 1,464 in July to 1,854 in January. Table 4 presents the month in which disciplinary reports were issued. There seems to be little seasonal variation in the issuance of disciplinary reports.

Characteristics of Disciplinary Reports

In this section several characteristics of disciplinary reports are discussed including: type of disciplinary report, disciplinary offense, finding, sanctions, administrative action taken on sanctions, isolation days, recommendations for loss of good conduct time, and disciplinary appeals.

Type of Disciplinary Report

Disciplinary reports are classified into three types: major, minor and referred to District Attorney (D.A.). Overall, 75 percent of the reports were classified as major, 25 percent were classified as minor, and less than one percent were initially referred to the D.A. Appendix B shows the type of disciplinary report issued for each reporting institution. The type of disciplinary report varied widely by institution. For example, 99 percent of the reports written at Norfolk were classified as major while 32 percent of the reports written at Longwood were classified as major.

Type of Disciplinary Report

Report Type	Number	Percent
Major	15,097	(75)
Minor	5,163	(25)
Referred to D.A.	61	(0)
TOTAL	20,321	(100)

Disciplinary Offense

There are thirty-one different offenses for which offenders can receive disciplinary reports. These offenses are described in Appendix A. In any single disciplinary report an offender can be cited for more than one offense so that the number of offenses committed is greater than the number of disciplinary reports issued. The present analysis incorporates up to five offenses per disciplinary report. Of the 20,321 disciplinary reports, 7,398 (36 percent) involved one offense, 6,269 (31 percent) involved two offenses, 4,102 (20 percent) involved three offenses, 1,778 (9 percent) involved four offenses, and 774 (4 percent) involved five offenses. In total, the 20,321 disciplinary reports involved 43,224 separate disciplinary offenses.

Table 6 presents the offenses for which offenders received disciplinary reports in 1986. The first column represents the number of disciplinary reports in which the particular offense was involved and the second column represents the percentage of reports in which this offense was involved. For example, offense number 19, abusive language, was cited in 2,433 (12 percent) of the reports as one of the first five offenses. Because disciplinary reports often involve more than one offense, the columns sum to more than the number of reports and to more than 100 percent.

The most common disciplinary offenses were: number 2, violating rules (47 percent); number 1, disobeying, lying or insolence (34 percent); and number 8, disrupting order (34 percent). As shown in Appendix B disciplinary offenses vary widely by institution. For example, 3 percent of the reports written at Cedar Junction involved offense number 10, alcohol/other drug, compared to 32 percent of the reports written at Medfield.

Disciplinary Report Findings

The disciplinary report board that hears the case will issue a finding. Table 7 presents the findings of all 1986 disciplinary reports. In 65 percent of the reports the finding was guilty; in 12 percent the report resulted in a warning; in 11 percent the report was dismissed or the offender was found not guilty; in 7 percent the report was filed; in 3 percent the report was pending or the offender was unavailable (on escape status or released before hearing); and in 2 percent the report was consolidated with other reports and a single finding was issued for all reports.

Sanctions

If an offender is found guilty of a disciplinary report, the board can impose sanctions upon the offender. The present analysis incorporates up to four sanctions per disciplinary report. Of the 20,321 disciplinary reports, 7,017 (35 percent) resulted in no sanction, 10,611 (52 percent) resulted in one sanction, 2,300 (11 percent) resulted in two sanctions, 384 (2 percent) resulted in three sanctions, and 9 (less than one percent) resulted in four sanctions. In total, the 20,321 disciplinary reports resulted in 16,399 sanctions.

Table 8 presents the sanctions that resulted from disciplinary reports issued in 1986. The first column represents the number of disciplinary reports in which the particular sanction was involved and the second column represents the percentage of reports in which this offense was involved. For example, extra work was cited in 2,177 reports (11 percent) as one of the first four sanctions. Because disciplinary reports often involve more than one sanction, the columns sum to more than the number of reports and to more than 100 percent.

The most common sanctions were isolation time (which was given in 34 percent of the reports), extra work (11 percent), room restriction (10 percent), and loss of privileges (10 percent).

Administrative Action. Sanctions for disciplinary reports can be invoked or suspended by the disciplinary board. Overall, 13 percent of all sanctions were suspended, and 87 percent were invoked.

Isolation Time. One common sanction imposed in response to disciplinary reports at secure facilities is isolation time. Table 9 shows the number of isolation days meted out for disciplinary infractions. Isolation days were given in 6,816 times in 6,764 disciplinary reports. The median number of days was seven.

Good Conduct Days Lost. Another common sanction is the recommendation of loss of good conduct days. Table 10 shows the number of good conduct days that were recommended to be deducted. In 394 cases there was a recommendation for loss of good conduct days. The recommended number of days lost ranged from 2 to 365, and in 2 cases the recommendation was that all good conduct days be lost. The most frequently occurring recommendation was for the loss of 30 days.

Disciplinary Report Appeals

Inmates can appeal the results of their disciplinary report to the Superintendent. In 1986, eight percent of all disciplinary report findings were appealed.

Characteristics of Offenders Receiving
Disciplinary Reports

Table 12 presents selected characteristics of offenders receiving disciplinary reports. The first two columns present offender characteristics for each disciplinary report. Thus, offenders receiving multiple disciplinary reports are represented multiple times in these columns. The last two columns present information on individuals who received disciplinary reports. Thus, each individual is represented once, regardless of the number of disciplinary reports received.

Most of the disciplinary reports were received by violent offenders (73 percent). Nine percent were lifers and 60 percent were serving other Cedar Junction sentences. Ninety-two percent were male and 8 percent were female. Fifty-five percent were non-hispanic white, 35 percent were non-hispanic black, 9 percent were hispanic (all races), and one percent were other races. The median age at disciplinary report was 25 years.

Summary

During 1986, 20,321 disciplinary reports were written. The disciplinary process involved over half of the offenders in the DOC during 1986. Two institutions (Cedar Junction and Norfolk) were responsible for 61 percent of all disciplinary reports. Over half of the inmates involved in the disciplinary process received only one or two reports during the year. Seventy-five percent of all reports were classified as major. The most commonly cited disciplinary offenses were violations of rule number 2 (violating rules), number 1 (disobeying, lying or insolence), or number 8 (disrupting order). The offender was usually found guilty of the offense which resulted in recommendations for isolation time, extra work, room restriction, or loss of privileges. The results of the board usually were not appealed. The typical offender receiving a disciplinary report was 25 years old, male and serving a Cedar Junction sentence for a violent offense.
