The Norfolk FireSense Program is an educational program to help prevent and address youth fire setting and fire play behavior. Qualifying program participants undergo an intake interview and screening process. To maximize the safety of children, families, communities and firefighters, most youth are referred through the juvenile court system. Referrals may also be made by school systems, police and fire departments, and family members. Measures are taken to maintain confidentiality. As appropriate, children and families may be referred to additional intervention services through service provider networks, and /or the juvenile court system.
