The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) describes amateur radio operators as people who “are qualified persons of any age who are interested in radio technique solely with a personal aim and without pecuniary interest.” Ham radio operators maintain and operate radio communications for the purpose of self-training, intercommunication, and technical investigations. Operation of an amateur station requires an amateur operator license from the FCC.

“Ham Radio Operator” registration plates can only be issued to persons with an active FCC license.

Mail the completed application, a copy of your FCC license, and a $20 check, payable to MassDOT, to the address at the top of the form.
