Legislative Victory for Peacetime Veterans

Efforts for the past 10 years finally paid off when Governor Romney signed Senate Bill 822 into law at a public ceremony on Friday, May 28, 2004. The new definition of “veteran” by state law recognizes the contributions of peacetime military veterans by making them eligible for most of the same state benefits as those who served during periods of war.

Approximately 54,000 Massachusetts veterans, primarily those who served between the Vietnam and Persian Gulf Wars are now eligible for state veterans’ benefits. The bill extends veteran’s status to those who served 180 days of regular active duty and who were honorably discharged from the U.S. military between May 8, 1975, and August 1, 1990. Veterans who earned a campaign medal for Lebanon, Grenada, or Panama and those who served in wartime require 90 days of active duty service. The bill also recognizes peacetime veterans with fewer than 180 days active duty who were awarded service-connected disabilities and National Guard and Reserve members with 90 days of regular active service, one day of which is wartime.

For more information about the state’s definition of “veteran,” visit the Department of Veterans’ Services website at www.mass.gov/veterans.

Other veterans’ legislation enacted this session includes Senate Bill 1985 providing military pay differential for those called up and Senate Bill 2164 providing for late counting of overseas ballots for city final elections. Senate Bill 2338 provides for Distinguished Flying Cross plates for veterans, handicapped symbol on disabled veterans’ plates, and Gold Star family license plates.

A Message from Heidi

Washington, D.C., was an inspirational place for me this summer. On a sweltering June day I arrived there to attend the VA Center for Women Veterans’ National Summit 2004. Despite the oppressive heat I visited the war memorials on the Mall and was especially touched by the beautiful, newly dedicated World War II Memorial. Another highlight was a special reception for Summit participants at the Women’s Memorial, which is amazing.

The VA convenes a Summit every four years that is free and open to anyone interested in women veterans’ issues. The goal of the Summit was to address women veterans’ issues and to make recommendations for legislative, programmatic, and outreach activities. Topics addressed covered a range of veterans’ issues from health care, homelessness, and sexual trauma, to benefits, employment, and research on women veterans’ health.

One of my favorite aspects of the Summit was meeting members of the VA’s Advisory Committee on Women Veterans. Every member of the Committee was in attendance, including Joan O’Connor, General Counsel at the Massachusetts Department of Veterans’ Services. These women are intelligent and experienced, and possess a sense of compassion and concern for women veterans.

It was energizing to listen to veterans and experts share their experiences and knowledge about various issues. I learned a great deal and returned from the Summit with a variety of goals to improve my work.

VA Disability Compensation

The U.S. Department of Veterans’ Affairs pays disability compensation benefits to veterans who are disabled by injury or disease incurred or aggravated during active military service. The monthly payment is based on the rate of disability (ranging from 10 to 100 percent receiving compensation) and the number of dependents.

A veteran can apply for an increase in a service-connected disability rating by writing to the VA’s Boston Regional Office, JFK Federal Building, Boston, MA 02203. The veteran should explain that the disability has worsened and list the medical facility in which treatment has been provided. Please include the veteran’s full name, claim number or social security number, and sign the statement. This action will re-open a claim for an increase in a service-connected condition.

A veteran may be rated at zero percent, meaning there is evidence of the service-connected condition, but it does not impair the veteran. An example is a minor scar. This zero percent rating, though not compensable, is beneficial, since it raises the veteran’s priority in other VA programs, and it may be reviewed for a higher rating if the condition worsens. A veteran may have a number of disabilities individually evaluated as zero percent, which produce 10 percent combined disability and entitle the veteran to disability compensation.

Veterans whose service-connected disability leaves them unable to maintain gainful employment may meet criteria for allowances at the 100 percent compensation rate under a benefit called “individual unemployability.”

Military Sexual Trauma Resources

The June 2004, Women Veterans’ Network Committee meeting focused on Military Sexual Trauma (MST). Dr. Amy Street, co-chair of the VA’s National Military Sexual Trauma Work Group presented an overview of MST and its prevalence. The Boston Vet Center’s Sexual Trauma Counselor Jen Erbe Leggett, LICSW, spoke about services available to treat MST.

Military sexual trauma is defined as “experiences of sexual assault or sexual harassment that occur in military settings.” Physical force may or may not have been used in the assault. Both women and men experience MST.

The good news about MST is that there are effective treatments that can reduce symptoms and improve quality of life. The VA provides free treatment to any veteran, Reserve, or Guard Member who has experienced MST, regardless of general eligibility for VA healthcare.
