FOR THE YEAR ENDING

WILLIAM WHITE, PRINTER TO THE STATE.

1862.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

AUDITOR'S DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, }
January 15, 1862. }

Hon. A. H. BULLOCK, Speaker of the House of Representatives:

DEAR SIR,—I have the pleasure to transmit herewith, through you, to the legislature, my Report as Auditor of the Commonwealth, for the year ending December 31, 1861.

And have the honor to be,

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

LEVI REED, Auditor.

AUDITOR'S DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, }
January 15, 1862. }

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives :—

By the 15th chapter of the General Statutes, it is provided, that "on or before the fifteenth day of January of each year, the Auditor shall submit to the legislature a report exhibiting a full and accurate statement of the financial condition of the Commonwealth, and of the pecuniary transactions thereof, during the year ending on the last day of the preceding month ;" and also, that "he shall include in his report an estimate for the following year, of the ordinary income of the Commonwealth, and other means which he may point out for defraying of expenditures, and shall annex thereto such representations or suggestions as he may deem necessary."

In compliance with these provisions, I have the honor to submit this Report, with such suggestions as seem necessary in regard to the finances of the Commonwealth.

The year has been one of uncommon importance in the pecuniary transactions of the State, and has imposed much additional labor upon the office. In addition to the ordinary expenditures of about a million of dollars, we have paid upwards of three millions on account of military expenses for the general government.

In order to attend to this great increase of business, it has been necessary to employ an additional number of clerks in the office, besides taxing the regular clerks to the utmost of their ability.

This Report may appear to be too voluminous, and the multitude of details and numerous tables may seem rather to confuse than enlighten the legislature. But by referring to the laws relating to this office, which may be conveniently examined in the Auditor's Report of last year, it will be seen that the Report is only a literal compliance with the law.

The total amount received into the treasury during the year, on account of ordinary revenue, was $1,133,985.58; the total amount paid therefrom on the same account, $1,163,742.56. The ordinary expenses of the year 1861, already ascertained, amount to $1,026,388.56; but as the bills are not yet all in, the actual expense will probably amount to $1,100,000.

In addition to these expenditures, there has been paid from the treasury of the Commonwealth under chapter 216 of the Acts of 1861, for military expenses, the sum of $3,420,797.06. Of this sum there has been received from the United States and other sources $984,376.15, leaving the State in debt for the balance, $2,436,420.91, which it is expected will be ultimately refunded by the general government. For a full statement of these expenditures you are referred to detail number one hundred and sixty of this Report.

My predecessor, on the eighth page of his report for the last year, called the attention of the legislature to the law in regard to the method of calculating travelling expenses, by those to whom such expenses are allowed by law. I would respectfully renew the request, that the legislature shall define the law in such way as will relieve the subject from embarrassment, and make the matter perfectly plain.

The attention of the legislature is called to the necessity of providing for the payment of the interest on the bonds of the State loaned to the Troy and Greenfield Railroad Company. The amount thus loaned is nearly $800,000, the interest on which, at five per cent., amounts to $40,000. This company now neglects to pay this interest, and the amount is therefore estimated among the expenses of the year.

The amount expended for the support of paupers in the State almshouses has become very large, and is likely to continue burdensome to the Commonwealth. These institutions seem to be well managed, and the farms connected with them are being rapidly improved; and when they are more completely brought under cultivation will contribute much more than at present to the support of the paupers. The actual cost to the State in money, aside from the income of the farms, and the interest on the cost of the buildings, is about one dollar per week, for each person supported in them.

These farms may be made valuable auxiliaries in advancing agricultural science, and in improving the various breeds of cattle and swine in the Commonwealth. By making judicious selections of animals, and crossing them with care, and noting minutely the results, much valuable information might be obtained at a very trifling cost to the Commonwealth. At the same time care should be taken not to overstock the farms, which would be as unwise for the State as for an individual; nor, to let this degenerate into breeding merely fancy stock at enormous cost to the State.

There has been one new bank organized under the general banking law during the past year, making seven in all, with an aggregate capital amounting to $3,900,000, and an outstanding circulation received from this department of $1,107,482, secured by stocks amounting to $1,493,200.

The labor of signing bills in this department, making transfers of stock, counting bills to burn, and making the proper entries on the books, is fully equal to the labor of one man; and it is respectfully suggested, that as this service is for the benefit of these banks, it is but just that they pay the salary of a clerk, who, under the direction of the Auditor, shall have charge of this department.

The Act passed at the extra session of the legislature, being chapter 222 of the Acts of 1861, entitled "An Act in aid of the families of volunteers, and for other purposes," has given this department much trouble, and has been the cause of much dissatisfaction on the part of various persons, claiming the benefits of its provisions. It was not to be expected that a law which has no precedent in our legislation, the interpretation of which depended upon the varying opinions of the selectmen of the different towns, and the mayors and aldermen of the cities in the Commonwealth, could be at once understood by the public, or receive a uniform construction from those called to administer it. Perhaps the wonder is, that there has been so little instead of so much trouble.

By the first section provision is made "for the aid of the wife and of the children under sixteen years of age, of any one of their inhabitants, who, as a member of the volunteer militia of this State may have been mustered into or enlisted in the service of the United States, and for each parent, brother or sister or child, who, at the time of his enlistment, was dependent on him for support." By another clause in this section, this aid is to be furnished "if necessary." The two phrases, "if necessary," and, "as a member of the volunteer militia of this State," have given rise to much discussion, and the construction put upon them by the Auditor has been the ground of some complaint.

The law has not been understood by this department to extend a bounty to all parties enlisting, whether their families were in need of help or not, but only to provide for aid to families where their income, including the pay of the volunteer, was not sufficient for their support. In the case of commissioned officers it would seem that their pay and emoluments, equal to that of officers in the regular army of the United States, might afford a sufficient support to their families, and yet some towns return for reimbursement, sums paid to families of officers, as high in rank as colonel. It seems important that the legislature should take some action in this matter, so that the law may be uniform in its operation.

It would appear that some recruiting officers have represented the law as allowing a bounty to all who enlisted, and the volunteers have complained that they have been deceived, when they found that a different construction prevailed. In regard to the other clause, "as a member of the volunteer militia of this State," in the opinion of the Attorney-General, "it includes all regiments raised in the State, under the authority of the governor, the officers of which are by him commissioned." This construction of course excludes, from the benefits of the law, the families of those who enlist in regiments of other States, or in such regiments in this State as are not authorized by the governor. Whether this was the original intention of the legislature or not, it is plain that no other construction can properly be put on the law as it now stands.

Returns have been received from three hundred and seven of the cities and towns of the Commonwealth, claiming reimbursement to the amount of $469,752.19. The twenty-seven towns to be heard from will probably increase the amount to $475,000. Should the war continue, and the same rate of aid be allowed for the present year, the whole amount for 1862 would be not far from $2,000,000. From these returns it appears that the families of 14,288 volunteers have received the benefits of this aid from the State.

I would suggest that it would simplify the accounts very much, if the maximum allowance should be placed at three dollars per week, instead of twelve dollars per month; the amounts would be nearly the same, and it would require only one rate of pay instead of two.

The sixth section of the Act provides that "no reimbursement shall be allowed till a full report has been made to the Auditor of the Commonwealth, and carefully examined and approved by him." Various constructions have been put upon this provision of the law, and it seems desirable that a more definite statement of the Auditor's powers should be made.

There has been much anxiety on the part of the authorities of the cities and towns, to obtain the opinion of this office on the subject, which has burdened this department with an amount of correspondence heretofore unknown.

From the slight examination that I have been able to make, I am satisfied that great inequality exists in the manner of administering the law. While some towns have given it the most liberal construction, paying a bounty to the families of nearly all who enlisted, whether needy or not, others have construed it more strictly and furnished the aid in accordance with the rules laid down by this department, under the advice of the Attorney-General. One circumstance appears most singular in these reports, and that is, that where the volunteer has no family dependent on him, it would seem that he had supported his father and mother.

There should be a most thorough revision of these returns by some one before they are allowed, with full powers to make deductions in all cases where it would seem to be equitable.

The already extra duties of the Auditor so consume his time, that it would not be possible for him to give that attention to the subject that its importance demands, and I would respectfully suggest that there should be an agent or commissioner appointed, to make a thorough examination of these returns, with full powers as above suggested.

In section thirty of the fifteenth chapter of the General Statutes, it is provided that "No money shall be paid from the treasury, but upon the warrant of the governor, drawn in accordance with an appropriation in some Act or Resolve passed within the same political year, except for payments required on account of the principal or interest of a public debt, or for the salaries of the judges of the supreme judicial court, and of the governor, as established by standing laws." And it is also provided that "No warrant shall be drawn for the payment of any account or demand except for the pay-rolls of the council, senate and house of representatives, unless the same is certified by the Auditor."

This law has been understood by this department to require, that there should be a specific provision made in some appropriation bill of the year, in order to authorize the Auditor to allow a demand, notwithstanding there might be provisions of law requiring expenditures. But a question has arisen during the year, which has been decided by the supreme court, that seems to require a different interpretation of the law.

By chapter 154 of the Acts of 1861, provision was made for the appointment of certain commissioners to make experiments with the dam across the Concord River at Billerica, who were authorized to allow certain damages; and to pay these, this provision is added, "the governor being hereby authorized to draw his warrant therefor." This phraseology has uniformly been understood to mean, that the money must be paid when there was an appropriation by the legislature to meet it.

During some of the pleadings before the supreme court this question was raised, and Chief Justice Bigelow gave the opinion of the court on this clause, as follows:

"This is clearly an appropriation of so much money as may be necessary to pay the damages which may be assessed under the Act. The provision could not be more explicit or definite as to the amount appropriated. Until the damages are ascertained and adjudicated, the sums which will be required to pay them is necessarily uncertain. There is no provision of law which makes it requisite to the validity of an appropriation from the treasury of the Commonwealth, that a specific sum should be named and set apart as a fund to meet a particular exigency. It is sufficient if by an Act or Resolve passed during the same or the preceding political year the payment is authorized."

The amount required being large, and the legislature not making any appropriation, except as above, I addressed a note to the attorney-general and received the following reply:—

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE, }
Jan. 1, 1862. }

Hon. LEVI REED, Auditor :

Dear Sir,—The awards to the several parties under statutes 1861 chapter 154, are payable from the treasury without any special appropriation for the purpose, the Act itself is in effect an appropriation. Such was the decision of the supreme court in a former case.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

DWIGHT FOSTER, Attorney-General."

Under the above decisions, I felt obliged to allow the claims, and drew a certificate for the amount accordingly.

The attorney-general is also of opinion that this phrase, "the governor shall draw his warrant therefor," precludes the necessity of the examination of any demand by the Auditor, or certificate from him.

These decisions of the court and attorney-general, will make it necessary hereafter for the legislature to omit the above phrase, unless they intend to make it a specific appropriation in each case, and allow bills to pass without the supervision of the Auditor. Such a radical change in the general policy of the Commonwealth in regard to making specific appropriations, surely is not contemplated by the legislature.

It has become the settled policy of the State to make particular appropriations for all expenditures, and to require a detailed report from the Auditor of the manner in which they are spent. This is a wise provision in our statutes, and is of the first importance in securing economy and responsibility in all the transactions of this department of the government.

The estimated revenue of the Commonwealth for the year 1862, from ordinary sources, exclusive of direct taxes, as found in detail in Statement number Four of this Report, amounts to $762,000.

The expenses of the year I estimate as follows:—

For ordinary expenses,	$1,100,000 00
aid to families of volunteers,	475,000 00
interest on military expenses for the United States,	120,000 00
interest on Scrip loaned Troy & Greenfield Railroad Company,	40,000 00
tax of the United States after deducting fifteen per cent.,	700,894 13½
Making a total of	$2,435,894 13½
From this deduct ordinary revenue,	762,000 00
And it leaves,	$1,673,894 13½
For which provision must be made.

In the above, no estimate is made of military expenses, as it is presumed that as much will be received from the United States on past accounts, as we shall expend for that purpose. The interest on the amount loaned the general government will also it is expected, be provided for by them.

Deducting this amount from the above sum, it will leave $1,553,894.13½ to be provided for, or for convenience, say $1,550,000.

It is presumed that no one will for a moment doubt the necessity of providing, by taxation in some form, for the payment of so much of the above amount as is considered a regular or ordinary expense. We have no right to postpone to the future, burdens that properly belong to us. There is always a temptation in public as in private matters, to put off unpleasant duties to some future time, leaving it to our successors to meet such difficulties. We should come up manfully to the responsibilities of our day and generation, and take the share of the trials and troubles that falls to our lot. It is unpleasant to speak of taxation, but "sure as rates" has passed into a proverb, and we are no exception to the general rule.

So much of this amount as can properly be considered exceptional and extraordinary in its character, might with propriety, in part at least be funded. It is but just that future generations should pay a portion of the expense it has cost us to transmit unimpaired to our posterity the rights and privileges we have received from our fathers.

The aid to families of volunteers may properly be considered of this latter class, and a part of it might therefore, be borrowed on a comparatively short time, say from five to ten years. If $350,000 of this amount is funded it would leave to be raised by taxation $1,200,000.

This sum is larger than the State has ever assessed in a direct tax on the polls and estates of the Commonwealth in any one year. The largest tax being in 1857 to the amount of $900,000.

I would respectfully suggest whether a part at least of the above amount might not be raised by a revenue derived from sources not already taxed. There are various methods of indirect taxation used in other States, and perhaps some of them might be adopted with advantage to our income.

A probate tax, or a tax on all estates settled in probate courts might be adopted, and be but little felt by the community, as it would come from those who are receiving property, and at a time when they would feel best able to bear it. It would also be as equal as any other mode of indirect taxation, as all property of the State passes through the probate courts, on the average, once in thirty years.

Another source might be a tax on such corporations as enjoy exclusive privileges by charter from the State. The banks are already taxed in this way, and yield the largest item in the ordinary revenue. Why should other corporations be exempt from similar burdens? If it is said that stock in corporations is already taxed to the shareholders, the same is true of stock in banks. This tax might be based on the capital stock, or upon the net earnings of the companies.

Another source of revenue may be found in an auction tax. This for many years was a favorite source of income in this Commonwealth, and was abolished under a representation that it was the means of driving the sales of large cargoes of foreign goods from Boston to New York. If there should be any objection on this account, it might perhaps be obviated by making the per cent. on large sums very light, and increasing the rates on smaller amounts.

From some or all of these sources a revenue of $300,000 might be raised, that would scarcely be felt by the community, which would leave only $900,000 to be raised by a tax on polls and estates, the same amount as in 1857, when there was no extraordinary cause for expenditures. I perfectly understand that there are abundant objections to all methods of raising money, and many may be disposed to complain of the above suggestions; but the subject of taxes is always unpleasant, and in whatever form money is raised complaints are never wanting.

The credit of the Commonwealth stands at the highest point in the markets of the world. Its bonds are sought after as safe investments in every community. If we would maintain this reputation, which it is our highest interest to do, we must tax ourselves so that every bond-holder will feel, that whatever may happen to other States, less fortunately situated, Massachusetts will always promptly pay when due, both principal and interest.

The present indebtedness of the Commonwealth is amply secured by mortgages upon her railroads, to which her scrip has been loaned, and by sinking funds, which will be sufficient to meet her obligations at maturity. For details of these loans and funds I would refer to Statements number Five and Six of this Report. In this position, with judicious legislation, there can be no fear but that the rank she has so long held in the financial world will be fully maintained.

These estimates and calculations have been based upon the supposition, that there will be no appropriations made but those for the ordinary expenses of the government, and the aid to families of volunteers. Should other matters of legislation require extraordinary expenses, additional provision should be made for them.

In conclusion I would ask the favorable consideration of the legislature, for the clerks in this department, whose labors during the past year, owing to the increase of business, have been most laborious and constant. To despatch the public business, and avoid embarrassment to others, they have lengthened out the days, sometimes far into the hours of the night.

Should the present pressure of business continue, I shall be obliged to ask for an appropriation for an additional number of clerks.

Having examined the books, accounts and vouchers of the Treasurer, in accordance with the seventh section of chapter fifteen of the General Statutes, I find them to be correct.

In these remarks I have not entered into statements of the different branches of public expenditures, as the details furnished by the various tables in this Report, will give all the information desired.

All the details of the transactions of this department of the government are arranged under the following
