Notice of Data Breach

Dear <<first_name>> <<last_name>>,

I am writing to tell you about a data security incident at the Law Office of Constance W. Cranch that may have exposed some of your personal information. I take the protection and proper use of your information very seriously. As a valued client of the firm, I am contacting you directly to explain the circumstances of the incident.

What happened?

On August 31, 2024, I learned that an unknown unauthorized third-party actor was able to gain access to a work email account at my firm. As soon as I learned of it, I moved quickly to revoke the third-party's access and secure the account. At this stage, I have a high degree of confidence there is no ongoing security threat and the incident was limited to one email account at my firm and did not impact any other firm systems.

To identify any personally identifying information ("PII"), I undertook a comprehensive review of the contents of the compromised email account. You are receiving this letter because your PII was identified in the course of this review. I do not have any affirmative evidence that your PII was actually accessed or acquired by the unauthorized third-party or has been misused, but I am notifying you nevertheless so that you can take steps to protect yourself.

What information was involved?

When the unauthorized third party had access to these accounts, it is possible that the following personal data was accessible in the body of or an attachment to one of the emails in the compromised accounts: <<b2b_text_1 (data elements)>>.

Fraud Alerts. There are two types of fraud alerts you can place on your credit report to put your creditors on notice that you may be a victim of fraud—an initial alert and an extended alert. You may ask that an initial fraud alert be placed on your credit report if you suspect you have been, or are about to be, a victim of identity theft. An initial fraud alert stays on your credit report for at least one year. You may have an extended alert placed on your credit report if you have already been a victim of identity theft and you have the appropriate documentary proof. An extended fraud alert stays on your credit report for seven years. You can place a fraud alert on your credit report by contacting any of the three national credit reporting agencies.

Security Freeze. You have the ability to place a security freeze, also known as a credit freeze, on your credit report free of charge.

A security freeze is intended to prevent credit, loans and services from being approved in your name without your consent. To place a security freeze on your credit report, you may use an online process, an automated telephone line, or submit a written request to any of the three credit reporting agencies listed above. The following information must be included when requesting a security freeze (note that, if you are requesting a credit report for your spouse, this information must be provided for him/her as well): (1) full name, with middle initial and any suffixes; (2) Social Security number; (3) date of birth; (4) current address and any previous addresses for the past 5 years; and (5) any applicable incident report or complaint with a law enforcement agency or the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The request must also include a copy of a government-issued identification card and a copy of a recent utility bill or bank or insurance statement. It is essential that each copy be legible, and display your name, current mailing address, and the date of issue.
