

ASSAULT AND BATTERY ON A CHILD UNDER 14
CAUSING BODILY INJURY

G.L. c. 265, § 13J(b) (¶ 1)

The defendant is charged with having committed an assault and battery causing bodily injury to a child under 14 years of age.

I. INTENTIONAL ASSAULT AND BATTERY

In order to prove the defendant guilty of committing an intentional assault and battery causing bodily injury to a person under 14 years of age, the Commonwealth must prove four things beyond a reasonable doubt:

First: That the defendant touched the person of [the alleged victim] ;

Second: That the defendant intended to touch [the alleged victim] ;

Third: That the touching caused bodily injury to [the alleged victim] ; and

Fourth: That [the alleged victim] was a person under 14 years of age on the date of the alleged offense.

To prove the first element, the Commonwealth must prove the defendant touched [the alleged victim]. A touching is any physical contact, however slight.

If the touching was indirect. A touching may be direct as when a person strikes another, or it may be indirect as when a person sets in motion some force or instrumentality that strikes another.

To prove the second element, the Commonwealth must prove that the defendant intended to touch [the alleged victim], in the sense that the defendant consciously and deliberately intended the touching to occur, and that the touching was not merely accidental or negligent.

If additional language on intent is appropriate. The Commonwealth is not required to prove that the defendant specifically intended to cause injury to [the alleged victim].

Where there is evidence that the touching may be justified by a legally recognized “right” or “excuse,” the jury should be instructed with the specific “right” or “excuse” instructions (e.g., accident (9.100); necessity (9.240); self-defense (9.260)). See Commonwealth v. Wood, 90 Mass. App. Ct. 271, 286-86 (2016) (where evidence did not raise a claim of right or excuse, the jury need not consider whether the touching was without right or excuse); Commonwealth v. Conley, 34 Mass. App. Ct. 50, 58 (1993) (where no evidence of self-defense, jury need not be instructed that right or excuse may justify the touching).

To prove the third element, the Commonwealth must prove that the touching caused bodily injury to [the alleged victim] .

Under the law, a bodily injury is a substantial impairment of the physical condition. It is an injury to any body part that considerably or significantly compromises its usual bodily function such as, but not limited to: (a burn) (a fracture of any bone) (a subdural hematoma) (injury to any internal organ) (any injury which occurs as a result of repeated harm to any bodily function or organ, including human skin) (any physical condition which substantially imperils a child’s health or welfare).

G.L. c. 265, § 13J(a)

Commonwealth v. Ford, 424 Mass. 709, 711 (1997) (assault and battery is a general intent crime and does not require specific intent to injure the victim, but its intentional branch requires an intentional touching, and not merely an intentional act resulting in a touching); Commonwealth v. Moore, 36 Mass. App. Ct. 455, 457-60 (1994) (intentional branch of assault and battery requires proof “that the defendant intended that a touching occur” and not merely “proof that the defendant did some intentional act, the result of which was a touching of the victim”); Commonwealth v. Ferguson, 30 Mass. App. Ct. 580, 584 (1991) (intentional branch of assault and battery requires proof “that the defendant’s conduct was intentional, in the sense that it did not happen accidentally”). See Commonwealth v. Bianco, 388 Mass. 358, 366-367 (1983) (assault and battery by joint venture).

II. RECKLESS ASSAULT AND BATTERY

A. If intentional assault and battery was already charged on. There is a second way in which a person may be guilty of an assault and battery. Instead of intentional conduct, it involves reckless conduct that results in bodily injury.

B. If intentional assault and battery was not already charged on. The defendant is charged with having committed an assault and battery by reckless conduct causing bodily injury to a person under 14 years of age.

In order to prove the defendant guilty of having committed an assault and battery by reckless conduct causing bodily injury to a person under 14 years of age, the Commonwealth must prove three things beyond a reasonable doubt:

- First: That the defendant intentionally engaged in actions which caused bodily injury to [the alleged victim] ;
- Second: That the defendant's actions amounted to reckless conduct; and

Third:* That [the alleged victim] was under 14 years of age on the date of the alleged offense.

To prove the first element, the Commonwealth must prove that the defendant intended (his) (her) acts which resulted in the touching, in the sense that defendant consciously and deliberately intended the act or acts to occur and that the act or the acts did not happen accidentally.

The Commonwealth must also prove that the defendant's acts caused bodily injury to [the alleged victim] . Under the law, a bodily injury is a substantial impairment of one's physical condition. It is an injury to any body part that considerably or significantly compromises its usual bodily function such as, but not limited to: (a burn) (a fracture of any bone) (a subdural hematoma) (injury to any internal organ) (any injury which occurs as a result of repeated harm to any bodily function or organ, including human skin) (any physical condition which substantially imperils a child's health or welfare.

G.L. c. 265, § 13J(a). Note that this instruction differs from Instruction 6.150 (Reckless Assault and Battery) because the definition of bodily injury by case law that is applicable to the reckless branch of assault and battery ("a bodily injury . . . sufficiently serious to interfere with the alleged victim's health or comfort." Commonwealth v. Burno, 396 Mass. 622, 625-627 (1986)), is different from the statutory definition of "bodily injury" applicable to this offense. Under the statutory definition, the injury must be comparable in gravity to one of the enumerated examples – but need not rise to the level of a "serious bodily injury." Commonwealth v. Ryan, 93 Mass. App. Ct. 486, 491 (2018).

To prove the second element, the Commonwealth must prove the defendant acted recklessly. It is not enough for the Commonwealth to prove that the defendant acted negligently – that is, acted in a way that a reasonably careful person would not. It must be shown that the defendant's actions went beyond mere negligence and amounted to recklessness. The defendant acted recklessly if (he) (she) knew, or should have known, that such actions were very likely to cause substantial harm to someone, but (he) (she) ran that risk and went ahead anyway.

But it is not necessary that (he) (she) intended to injure or strike the alleged victim, or that (he) (she) foresaw the harm that resulted. If the defendant actually realized in advance that (his) (her) conduct was very likely to cause substantial harm and decided to run that risk, such conduct would of course be reckless. But even if (he) (she) was not conscious of the serious danger that was inherent in such conduct, it is still reckless conduct if a reasonable person, under the circumstances as they were known to the defendant, would have recognized that such actions were so dangerous that it was very likely that they would result in substantial injury.

Commonwealth v. Correia, 50 Mass. App. Ct. 455, 457-58 (2000) (statute prohibiting assault and battery sets forth the common law crime which includes both intentional and reckless forms of the crime). See also Commonwealth v. Grey, 399 Mass. 469, 472 n.4 (1987) (“ ‘The standard of wanton or reckless conduct is at once subjective and objective’ It depends on what the defendant knew (subjective) and how a reasonable person would have acted (objective) knowing those facts.”) (quoting Commonwealth v. Welansky, 316 Mass. 383, 398 (1944)); Commonwealth v. Godin, 374 Mass. 120, 129 (1977) (standard “is at once both a subjective and objective standard, and is based in part on the knowledge of facts which would cause a reasonable man to know that a danger of serious harm exists. Such knowledge has its roots in experience, logic, and common sense, as well as in formal legal standards.”); Commonwealth v. Welansky, 316 Mass. 383, 399 (1944) (“Wanton or reckless conduct amounts to what has been variously described as indifference to or disregard of probable consequences”).

SUPPLEMENTAL INSTRUCTIONS

Victim injured while escaping. The defendant may be convicted of assault and battery if the Commonwealth has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant caused [the alleged victim] reasonably to fear an immediate attack from the defendant, which then led (him) (her) to try to (escape) (or) (defend) (himself) (herself) from the defendant, and in doing so injured (himself) (herself).

NOTES:

1. No verdict slip or specific unanimity instruction required where both intentional and reckless assault and battery are alleged. Where the evidence warrants instructing on both intentional assault and battery and reckless assault and battery, the jurors need not be unanimous on whether the assault and battery was intentional or reckless. The judge, therefore, need not give a specific unanimity instruction or provide verdict slips for the jury to indicate the basis of its verdict. Commonwealth v. Mistretta, 84 Mass. App. Ct. 906, 906-07, rev. denied, 466 Mass. 1108 (2013). This is because “the forms of assault and battery are . . . closely related subcategories of the same crime.” Id. at 907. “Specific unanimity is not required, because they are not ‘separate, distinct, and essentially unrelated ways in which the same crime can be committed.’” Id. (quoting Commonwealth v. Santos, 440 Mass. 281, 288 (2003)).

2. Medical testimony. In a prosecution for assault and battery, medical testimony about the victim’s injuries is admissible to establish that the defendant’s assault on the victim was intentional and not accidental. Commonwealth v. Gill, 37 Mass. App. Ct. 457, 463-64 (1994).

3. Proof of victim’s status. Where the Legislature has not expressly provided scienter about age or disability to be an element of the offense, proof that the defendant knew the victim’s age is not required. The Commonwealth need only prove that the victim was a person under 14 years of age at the time of the offense. See Commonwealth v. Montalvo, 50 Mass. App. Ct. 85, 88-89 & n.3 (2000).

4. Transferred intent. An instruction on transferred intent indicates that the Commonwealth need only prove intent as to one of the intended victims and does not have to prove intent specifically directed at each of the actual victims. Commonwealth v. Melton, 436 Mass. 291, 299 n.11 (2002). “It is a familiar rule that one who shoots intending to hit A., and accidentally hits and injures B., is liable for an assault and battery on B.” Commonwealth v. Hawkins, 157 Mass. 551, 553 (1893); accord Commonwealth v. Drumgold, 423 Mass. 230, 259 (1996); Commonwealth v. Pitts, 403 Mass. 665, 668-69 (1989); Commonwealth v. Puleio, 394 Mass. 101, 109-10 (1985); Commonwealth v. Ely, 388 Mass. 69, 76 n.13 (1983).

5. Statement of reasons required if imprisonment not imposed. A jury session judge sentencing for this or one of the other crimes against persons found in G.L. c. 265 who does not impose a sentence of incarceration “shall include in the record of the case specific reasons for not imposing a sentence of imprisonment,” which shall be a public record. G.L. c. 265, § 41.

6. Aggravated form of offense. The statute provides for an enhanced penalty where the assault and battery causes serious bodily injury, however District Court does not have jurisdiction over this enhanced offense as it provides for a penalty of up to 15 years in the house of correction and is not specifically enumerated in G.L. c. 218, § 26.
