Fraud Alert. You may place a fraud alert in your file at no cost by calling one of the three nationwide credit reporting agencies above. A fraud alert tells creditors to follow certain procedures, including contacting you before they open any new accounts or change your existing accounts. For that reason, placing a fraud alert can protect you, but also may delay you when you seek to obtain credit.

Security Freeze. You have the right to place a security freeze on your credit report. A security freeze is intended to prevent credits, loans, and services from being approved in your name without your consent; however, using a security freeze may delay your ability to obtain credit. Pursuant to federal law, you cannot be charged to place or lift a security freeze on your credit report.

To place a security freeze on your credit report, you may use an online process, an automated telephone line, or submit a written request to the three credit reporting agencies listed above. The following information must be included when requesting a security freeze (note that if you are requesting a credit report for your spouse, this information must be provided by him/her, as well): (1) full name, with middle initial and any suffixes; (2) Social Security number; (3) date of birth; (4) current address and any previous addresses for the past five years; and (5) any applicable incident report or complaint with a law enforcement agency or the Registry of Motor Vehicles. This request must also include a government issued identification card and a copy of a recent utility bill or bank or insurance statement. It is essential that each copy be legible, display your name and current mailing address, and the date of issue. Please review your state's requirement(s) and/or credit bureau requirement(s) for the specific document(s) to be submitted.

Federal Trade Commission. You can obtain information from the Federal Trade Commission about steps you can take to avoid identity theft, including information about fraud alerts and security freezes. You can also report any suspected identity theft to the FTC at www.identitytheft.gov.
