NOTICE OF DATA BREACH

Dear [REMITTER RECIPIENT]:

We have been notified by Wells Fargo of an incident involving one or more checks you mailed to American Honda Finance Corporation (AHFC) that were processed at a Wells Fargo facility. Wells Fargo provides our company with services for processing payment remittances from our customers. As our valued customer, we are notifying you on behalf of Wells Fargo that the information on your check(s) may have been exposed in this incident.

What happened?

Wells Fargo informed us that one or more check(s) you sent to us and that was received by Wells Fargo as our payment processor during the period October 14, 2021 through January 11, 2022 was involved in a data security incident. This information and the timeframe referenced are based on information provided to us by Wells Fargo as of the date of this mailing.

Law enforcement has been contacted and the investigation into this incident is ongoing. This notice was not delayed because of a law enforcement investigation.

What information was involved?

Information included on your check(s) was potentially exposed, such as your name, address, checking account and routing numbers, and any information you may have written on the memo line.

What we are doing.

Your privacy and data security are our top priority. We obtained assurance from Wells Fargo that they have updated security policies and procedures related to employees and are reviewing additional security measures to reduce the likelihood of this happening in the future. Wells Fargo is also offering you a complimentary two-year subscription to Experian IdentityWorksSM to monitor your identity for incidents of fraud. To accept this offer, please activate your subscription by following the instructions in the enclosed document from Wells Fargo.

What you can do.

You can take important steps to protect your accounts and finances such as: (i) monitor balances and transactions for unfamiliar charges or withdrawals, (ii) watch mail items and check free credit reports at www.annualcreditreport.com to identify any new credit offers or accounts, or increased limits on existing accounts that you did not initiate, and (iii) contact your financial institution to learn about steps you can take to protect against fraud, including any fraud prevention products and services offered by your financial institution. If you suspect that you are a victim of identity theft or fraud, contact your local law enforcement agency, state Attorney General, or the Federal Trade Commission. You have the right to obtain a police report.

You may also consider placing a security freeze on your credit file. A security freeze means potential creditors are not able to get your credit report and makes it harder for an identity thief to open new accounts in your name. To place a free security freeze on your credit file, you will need to contact the nationwide credit bureaus (Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion). You may need to give the credit bureaus your name, address, date of birth, social security number, and other information. After you request your security freeze, each credit bureau will give you a unique personal information number or password that you should keep in a safe place. You will need to contact the credit bureaus with your personal information number or password to lift the security freeze.

You can also place a fraud alert on your credit file by contacting any of the nationwide credit bureaus. A fraud alert instructs creditors to contact you before they open any new accounts in your name or change your existing accounts. A fraud alert and security freeze can help protect you, but they make it more difficult to obtain credit quickly.

AHFC has no visibility to your bank accounts and cannot provide information about accounts at other financial institutions. If you believe your AHFC account number was written on your check and was potentially exposed, you can monitor your account activity at our website, hondafinancialservices.com, and contact us if you detect suspicious activity.

AHFC holds its service providers to a high standard. We regret this incident occurred and apologize for any concern it may cause.

For more information.

If you have any questions regarding this incident, contact us at 800-524-3506 extension 30126.

Sincerely,

American Honda Finance Corporation
