

Community Justice Support Centers Successful Alternatives to Incarceration

In Massachusetts, Community Justice Support Centers

Offer rehabilitative services and support – with the goal of reduced recidivism – to individuals who have criminal justice involvement. These Centers, located in 18 communities across the state, provide participants with an opportunity to learn tools and techniques that will help them improve their lives and integrate into the community.

Services include:

- Cognitive Behavioral Treatment to address decision making and substance use disorders
- Education for GED/HiSET and college preparation, plus life skills such as financial literacy and computer and technology basics
- Employment support and career counseling to develop resumes, training, and resources to pursue a career

Community Justice

Support Centers are part of the Massachusetts Probation Service mission to keep communities safe. Support Centers provide services and support to people in the community instead of jail or prison.

Community Justice Support Centers Work

- CJSCs reduce recidivism through treatment, education, career services, monitoring, and community links
- People sentenced to support centers in 2018 had lower recidivism rates than those with similar risk profiles on probation. (UPenn CJP, 2018)
