INTRODUCTION AND INTERESTS OF AMICI STATES

The Amici States have a compelling interest in protecting the health, wellbeing, and economic security of their residents. To promote this interest, the States are committed to ensuring a strong and robust regulatory regime that makes contraception as widely available and affordable as possible. Access to contraception advances educational opportunity, workplace equality, and financial empowerment for women; improves the health of women and children; and reduces healthcare-related costs for individuals, families, and States.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act’s (“ACA”) “contraceptive mandate” plays a critical role in ensuring State residents access to affordable contraception. Most women receive health care coverage through employer-sponsored health plans. The ACA requires employer-sponsored plans to provide comprehensive, no-cost coverage for contraceptive care and services. The Amici States have an interest in ensuring that, in implementing the contraceptive mandate, the defendant federal agencies develop regulations that further women’s health and equality and that do not impose unjustifiable costs on the States. In addition, the Amici States have an interest in a fair and transparent federal regulatory process. The Amici States depend on federal agencies to follow proper rulemaking procedures designed to incorporate a broad array of interests—including those of State and local governments—before making important, and often complex, regulatory decisions.

The two Final Rules challenged in this case, which authorize employers and universities nationwide to prevent their employees and students from receiving the seamless access to contraceptive care and services guaranteed by the ACA, threaten each of these interests. The Amici States submit this brief to explain why they will be injured by the Final Rules, and why this Court should issue a preliminary injunction barring enforcement of the Final Rules anywhere in the United States.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Through this case, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey (the “Plaintiff States”) seek to protect themselves, other States, and women across the country from the harms that will result from Defendants’ attempt to nullify provisions of the ACA that guarantee women equal access to preventive medical care—specifically contraceptive care and services. Defendants have issued two Final Rules (the “Rules”) that authorize employers with religious or moral objections to contraception to block employees, students, and their dependents from receiving contraceptive coverage. See Religious Exemptions and Accommodations for Coverage of Certain Preventive Services Under the Affordable Care Act, 83 Fed. Reg. 57536 (Nov. 15, 2018); Moral Exemptions and Accommodations for Coverage of Certain Preventive Services Under the Affordable Care Act, 83 Fed. Reg. 57592 (Nov. 15, 2018).

The Rules have caused—and will continue to cause—significant harm to States nationwide. The Rules will deprive hundreds of thousands of employees, students, and their dependents of contraceptive coverage, threatening the health and wellbeing of the States’ residents and the economic and public health of the States generally. As a result, States will be forced to expend millions of dollars to provide replacement contraceptive care and services for their residents.

Because the Rules will injure women and States across the country, this Court should enjoin implementation of the Rules on a nationwide basis. When, as here, federal regulatory action is unlawful, courts typically invalidate the action in its entirety. That relief is especially warranted in this case, where the damage caused by the Rules will transcend State lines and where a preliminary injunction limited in scope to Pennsylvania and New Jersey would not guarantee those Plaintiff States complete relief.

ARGUMENT

I. States Across the Country Will Be Injured by the Final Rules.

This Court previously ruled that the Plaintiff States have Article III standing to challenge the Rules. Pennsylvania v. Trump, 281 F. Supp. 3d 553, 567 (E.D. Pa. 2017); accord California v. Azar, --- F.3d ---, 2018 WL 6566752, *5-*8 (9th Cir. Dec. 13, 2018) (five other States have standing under Article III to challenge the Rules). Like the Interim Final Rules (“IFRs”) that preceded them, the Final Rules will “inflict a direct injury upon [the Plaintiff States] by imposing substantial financial burdens on State coffers.” Pennsylvania, 253 F. Supp. 3d at 567. The Plaintiff States, moreover, “see[k] to protect a quasi-sovereign interest—the health of [their] women residents.” Id. at 566. That quasi-sovereign interest, this Court explained, “is inextricably intertwined” with the Plaintiff States’ fiscal injury—namely, an “increase [in] expenditures for State and local programs providing contraceptive services.” Id. at 567.

The Plaintiff States’ basis for Article III standing to challenge the Final Rules now is even stronger than their standing when Defendants issued the IFRs in October 2017. Defendants have now determined that far more women will be harmed by the Final Rules than they had previously estimated. See 83 Fed. Reg. 57578-80. Building off of that admission and this Court’s prior determination that the Plaintiff States had standing under Article III to challenge the IFRs, this brief will highlight the breadth of the nationwide injury to women and States across the country.

A. The Rules Will Cause Women in Every State to Lose Contraceptive Coverage and Thereby Inflict Financial Injury on States Nationwide.

Across the country, the Final Rules will result in hundreds of thousands of employees and students, as well as their dependents, losing the comprehensive contraceptive coverage guaranteed by the ACA. That loss, in turn, will impose direct financial harm on the States. Many women who lose contraceptive coverage as a result of the Rules will obtain replacement care and services through state-funded programs. Others, who are not able to obtain replacement coverage, may experience unintended pregnancies that impose additional costs on States.

1. The Rules Will Cause Hundreds of Thousands of People to Lose Coverage.

According to Defendants' Regulatory Impact Analysis for the Final Rules (hereinafter "the RIA"),¹ approximately three million people receive health insurance through employers and universities that have already asserted religious objections to providing coverage for contraceptive care and services under the ACA. See 83 Fed. Reg. 57575-78. Even more people receive insurance through employers that will be newly eligible for the expanded religious and moral exemptions provided by the Final Rules. See, e.g., 82 Fed. Reg. 47792, 47823 (Oct. 13, 2017) (Interim Final Rule) (comparing the prevalence of religious and moral objections to contraception); 83 Fed. Reg. 57628 (acknowledging that "uncertainty" concerning the prevalence of moral objections justifies higher estimates of the Rules' impact).

Out of these millions, Defendants estimate that between 70,515 ("lower bound estimate") and 126,400 ("upper bound estimate") women will lose employer-based coverage for their chosen method of contraception if the Final Rules go into effect.² See 83 Fed. Reg. 57578, 57580, 57627-

² These figures include only "women whose contraceptive costs will be impacted by the expanded exemptions in these final rules." 83 Fed. Reg. 57578. Notably, they represent a significant increase from the estimates contained in the IFRs. In the IFRs, Defendants indicated that between 31,715 and 120,000 women were likely to lose coverage. See 82 Fed. Reg. 47821, 47823, 47858. The increase from the IFRs to the Final Rules is largely attributable to the fact

28. These figures offer a conservative snapshot of the Rules’ direct and immediate effects. The actual number of women affected is likely to be “significantly higher.”³ Pennsylvania, 281 F. Supp. 3d at 582.

The lower and upper bounds are based on two different calculation methods. See 83 Fed. Reg. 57575-81. The upper bound estimate—126,400 women—is based on nationwide survey data concerning the number of employers that excluded contraceptive coverage from their insurance plans in 2010, before the ACA went into effect. See 83 Fed. Reg. 57578-81; 82 Fed. Reg. 47821-24. Defendants use this data to produce a statistical estimate of the number employers that will use the expanded moral and religious exemptions provided by the Rules. Id. Notably, Defendants assume that the number of women who will lose coverage as a result of the Rules will be only a small fraction of the number of women who were denied contraceptive coverage prior to the ACA. Id. The lower bound estimate—70,515⁴—is based primarily on the number employers that have that, in the IFRs, Defendants underestimated the number of people receiving contraceptive coverage through the accommodation by approximately 2,000,000. Compare 82 Fed. Reg. 47821 (stating that 1,027,000 people “are covered in accommodated plans”), with 83 Fed. Reg. 57577 (stating that 2,907,000 people “were covered in plans using the accommodation under the previous regulations”).

previously asserted religious objections to providing contraceptive coverage under the ACA, either through litigation (“litigating employers”) or by using the ACA’s existing accommodation (“accommodated employers”). See 83 Fed. Reg. 57575-78; 82 Fed. Reg. 47815-21.⁵

Importantly, the figures provided in the RIA are adjusted for many factors that could affect employers’ use of the expanded exemptions. For example, Defendants take into account the fact that some objecting employers will continue to use the accommodation rather than the expanded exemptions, see, e.g., 83 Fed. Reg. 57575, 82 Fed. Reg. 47815; that some employers are covered by injunctions exempting them from the contraceptive mandate, 83 Fed. Reg. 57575-76, 82 Fed. Reg. 47818; and that some employers who choose to use the expanded exemptions will object to covering only a few contraceptive methods, 83 Fed. Reg. 57581, 82 Fed. Reg. 47823.

In sum, the RIA establishes that, at a minimum, tens of thousands of women who are currently using a method of contraception covered by the ACA will immediately lose their employer-sponsored coverage as a direct result of the Rules, should the Rules go into effect.

2. The Rules Will Have a Nationwide Impact.

The Rules will affect States across the country. As discussed, Defendants’ more comprehensive analysis of the Rules’ likely impact—that 126,400 women will lose coverage as a result of the both the expanded moral and religious exemptions—is based on nationwide survey data. See supra, at 5-6. There is nothing in the Administrative Record to suggest that the Rules and accommodated employers will make use of the expanded exemptions, particularly the new moral exemption. See 83 Fed. Reg. 57578-81.

will not have a nationwide impact, nor is there a basis to believe that women residing in any particular State will be peculiarly unaffected by the Rules.⁶

The Administrative Record itself demonstrates the Rules' nationwide impact. It identifies litigating and accommodated employers and universities that have already raised religious objections to providing contraceptive coverage under the ACA. See Exhibit A.⁷ And it specifically identifies the litigating employers and universities that Defendants expect will use the expanded religious exemption created by the Rules. See id. These litigating employers and universities, as demonstrated in the following chart,⁸ are located in nearly every State in the country, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and the Amici States.

⁶ The contraceptive equity laws that exist in some States may mitigate, but will not eliminate, the harm caused by the Rules. With respect to the lower bound estimate, Defendants expect that approximately 63% of women who work for accommodated employers and who lose coverage because of the Rules will be covered by self-funded employer-based plans exempt from State regulation due to preemption by the Employee Retirement and Income Security Act. See 83 Fed. Reg. 57577. State contraceptive equity laws cannot, therefore, protect these women. The upper bound estimate, for its part, already excludes women covered by State contraceptive equity laws. The survey that the estimate is based upon was taken in 2010, after 29 States had already enacted contraceptive equity laws. See Institute of Medicine, CLINICAL PREVENTIVE SERVICES FOR WOMEN: CLOSING THE GAPS 51 (2011). Employers with fully insured plans in those States could not, therefore, have exempted contraceptive coverage at that time, even if they had wanted to.

⁸ This chart was compiled by using Exhibits 55 and 82 of the Administrative Record, see supra, note 7; complaints filed in each case brought by litigating employers and universities; and publicly available information about employer and university locations. To be clear, the chart is not exhaustive. Employers and universities other than the listed “litigating entities” are likely to make use of the new exemptions. See supra, at 5-6.

Collectively, these employers and universities employ or enroll hundreds of thousands of people across the country, many of whom also have dependents receiving insurance through these plans. See Exhibit A, pp. 669264-70.

3. The Rules Will Result in More Women Receiving Contraceptive Care Through State-Funded Programs.

The RIA estimates that the direct cost of providing replacement contraceptive care and services for women who lose employer-sponsored coverage because of the Rules will be between $41.2 and $67.3 million annually.⁹ See 83 Fed. Reg. 57578. States will bear a significant share of this cost. As Defendants acknowledge—in attempting to downplay the Rules’ impact on women and their families—women who lose coverage as a result of the Rules will receive care and services through state-funded programs. See, e.g., 82 Fed. Reg. 47803. Millions of women across the country who have health insurance through an employer-sponsored plan are also eligible for a range of state-funded programs.

Among the Plaintiff and Amici States, eligibility limits for state-sponsored programs extend up to 300% of the Federal Poverty Level (“FPL”) (and in limited circumstances beyond), with many such programs falling in the range of 200% to 250% of FPL.¹⁰ With the 2018 FPL set at $20,780 for a family of three, $25,100 for a family of four, and higher for larger families, see 83 Fed. Reg. 2642, 2643 (Jan. 18, 2018), this means that many women earning more than $40,000 per year and even some women earning over $70,000 may be eligible under these programs. State programs typically fall into three categories: Medicaid, Medicaid Family Planning Expansion, and

¹⁰ Guttmacher Institute, Medicaid Family Planning Eligibility Expansions (May 2018), <https://www.guttmacher.org/state-policy/explore/medicaid-family-planning-eligibility-expansions>.

Title X/State Family Planning. Coverage through employer-sponsored insurance generally does not render women ineligible, particularly where coverage has been declined by the employer, though not all States serve as secondary payers under their Medicaid programs. As shown in Exhibit B, a significant number of women with employer-sponsored insurance will be income-eligible for coverage under State programs when their employers choose to avail themselves of the exemptions created by the Rules. Overall, for the States included in the estimate, there are 7,173,998 income-eligible women, with 4,407,494 in plans that are not subject to any state-imposed contraception mandate.

States will also be required to fund coverage for women through their Medicaid programs. For example, Medicaid programs in at least 14 States serve as secondary payers for eligible individuals even if they have other forms of insurance. Using the basic Medicaid program income threshold (138% FPL),¹¹ there are approximately 1,212,166 women eligible to receive this type of “wraparound” coverage for contraceptive care and services in these States if their employers object to providing such coverage on religious or moral grounds.

The Amici States’ experience confirms that women who cannot utilize existing health care coverage (particularly when it comes to reproductive health) routinely seek coverage from state-funded programs, including at community health centers. In fact, many women who lose contraceptive coverage because of the Rules will already be utilizing such programs for other healthcare costs. In Massachusetts, for example, the State Medicaid program, MassHealth, already covers more than 150,000 residents with inadequate commercial insurance. For these women, there will be no need to “seek out” state-funded care; they will automatically receive state-funded

4. States Will Bear Increased Health Care Costs Associated with Unintended Pregnancies and Negative Health Outcomes.

The reduction in access to contraception caused by the Rules will also lead to an increase in unintended pregnancies and negative health outcomes for women and children.¹² This will impose additional costs on States, which already spend billions of dollars annually on unintended pregnancies.¹³ The fact that women who lose contraceptive coverage because of the Rules will retain the balance of coverage provided by their employer-sponsored plans will not insulate States from harm. Increased health care costs will be passed on to the States through Medicaid and other programs that provide wrap-around coverage and reimbursement for deductibles, co-insurance, emergency care, and other amounts and services not covered by primary insurance.¹⁴ These are significant costs: the average employer-sponsored plan has an annual deductible of $1,573 for individuals and, depending on plan-type, up to $4,527 for families, and most plans impose additional cost-sharing fees for emergency room and hospital care.¹⁵ State Medicaid programs will thus assume significant costs associated with the unintended pregnancies of women who lose coverage because of the Rules.

B. In This Era of Interstate Employment and College Attendance, These Economic Injuries Will Transcend State Lines.

The economic injuries inflicted by the Rules not only will occur in every State, but also will cross State borders. In today's interconnected economy, changes in access to healthcare and health insurance in one State invariably affect other States. Thus, if an employer or university drops contraceptive coverage for its employees or students under the Rules, the consequences of that action will be felt outside the State or States in which the employer or university is located. As a result, even the partial measures a State may take to mitigate the damages caused by the Final Rules—for example, a State contraception mandate, from which all self-funded plans would be exempt—are of limited use in protecting the State's residents and forestalling financial injury to the State. For the same reasons, an injunction limited only to the Plaintiff States could not protect them from all of the financial harms caused by the Final Rules.

Consider a few examples. Workers today often commute to or telework¹⁶ for employers that are located in States other than the State in which they live. Recent research on commuter patterns found that employees congregate in “mega-regions” nationwide that span State boundaries, and that these mega-regions are a more meaningful representation of economic ties than are State borders.¹⁷ Research on commuting patterns bears out this phenomenon. Significant numbers of New Jersey and Pennsylvania residents, for example, travel each day to jobs in other States—548,040 New Jersey residents, or 14% of the workforce, and 299,970 Pennsylvania residents, or 5.4% of the workforce.¹⁸ Thus, some of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey women who will lose contraceptive coverage because of the Rules will likely work for out-of-state employers, but nevertheless obtain state-funded replacement care in the States in which they reside.

Similarly, hundreds of thousands of students attend universities and colleges outside of their home State.¹⁹ Each year, for example, Pennsylvania takes in more than 32,000 first-time out-of-state students alone—the second most of any State in the country.²⁰ Many of these out-of-state students continue to receive health insurance coverage as dependents on their parents’ employer-based plans.²¹ Indeed, nationally, nearly 14 million people under the age of 26 remain on their parents’ employer-sponsored health plans.²² Thus, some of the women who will lose contraceptive coverage under the Rules will remain on parents' out-of-state employer-based health plans, but obtain state-funded replacement care in the States in which they live and attend school.

As these examples illustrate, the harms caused by the loss of contraceptive coverage will spread across state lines, as commuters, remote workers, and dependents who reside in other States lose coverage and seek replacement care where they live. The injuries threatened by the Final Rules to the States and their residents are thus pervasive across all the States both because women will be affected in every State, and because the Rules' harms will reach individual women across State lines.

II. A Nationwide Injury, Like The Injury Inflicted by the Final Rules, Requires a Nationwide Remedy.

In light of the interstate nature of the injury threatened by the Rules, the proper remedy for Defendants' statutory and constitutional violations is an injunction barring implementation of the Rules anywhere in the United States. This Court has authority under Article III to halt implementation of a uniform, national policy promulgated in violation of the ACA and the U.S. Constitution. It should exercise its broad discretion to fashion a remedy that provides complete relief to the parties and forestalls the harms that will otherwise be inflicted on women and States nationwide.

A. The Plaintiff States Have Standing to Seek a Nationwide Injunction.

To come within a federal court's Article III jurisdiction, "a plaintiff must demonstrate standing for each claim [it] seeks to press and for each form of relief that is sought," whether the relief be in the form of damages, injunctive relief, or declaratory relief. Town of Chester v. Laroe Estates, Inc., 137 S. Ct. 1645, 1650 (2017) (emphasis added). Thus, "a plaintiff who has standing to seek damages must also demonstrate standing to pursue injunctive relief." Id. But once a plaintiff has established that it has standing for each claim and each form of relief, Article III imposes no further restraint on the scope of equitable relief that a District Court may order. To the contrary, “[f]or ‘several hundred years,’ courts of equity have enjoyed ‘sound discretion’ to consider the ‘necessities of the public interest’ when fashioning injunctive relief.” United States v. Oakland Cannabis Buyers’ Co-op., 532 U.S. 483, 496 (2001) (quoting Hecht Co. v. Bowles, 321 U.S. 321, 329-30 (1944)); see also Kansas v. Nebraska, 135 S. Ct. 1042, 1053 (2015) (“When federal law is at issue and ‘the public interest is involved,’ a federal court’s ‘equitable powers assume an even broader and more flexible character than when only a private controversy is at stake.’” (quoting Porter v. Warner Holding Co., 328 U.S. 395, 398 (1946))); S.E.C. v. Wencke, 622 F.2d 1363, 1371 (9th Cir. 1980) (“The Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the broad equitable powers of the federal courts to shape equitable remedies to the necessities of particular cases.”).

This Court has already determined, correctly, that the Plaintiff States have Article III standing to pursue their claims and seek equitable relief. See Pennsylvania, 281 F. Supp. 3d at 564-69; supra, at 3. This Court therefore has broad authority, reviewed only for abuse of discretion, to issue an injunction tailored to the necessities of the case. See eBay v. MercExchange, L.L.C., 547 U.S. 388, 391, 394 (2006) (“[T]he decision whether to grant or deny injunctive relief rests within the equitable discretion of the district courts,” and that “act of equitable discretion” is only “reviewable on appeal for abuse of discretion.”). Previously, this Court exercised that authority to enjoin, on a preliminary basis, enforcement of the Interim Final Rules anywhere in the United States. See Pennsylvania, 281 F. Supp. 3d at 585. This Court’s exercise of that authority was consistent with numerous decisions from the Supreme Court and Courts of Appeals that have upheld nationwide injunctions without raising, or by affirmatively rejecting, Article III concerns. See, e.g., Trump v. Int’l Refugee Assistance Project, 137 S. Ct. 2080, 2087-88 (2017); Earth Island

Inst. v. Ruthenbeck, 490 F.3d 687, 699 (9th Cir. 2007), aff'd in part & rev'd in part on other grounds by Summers v. Earth Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488 (2009); Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Bolar Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., 747 F.2d 844, 85, 855-56 (3d Cir. 1984).

B. A Preliminary Injunction Invalidating the Rules Nationwide Is Necessary to Alleviate the Harms That Will Be Caused by the Rules.

Because Article III is no barrier to the issuance of a nationwide remedy, this Court should issue a preliminary injunction that bars enforcement of the Rules on a nationwide basis. Such relief would accord with the settled rule that legally deficient regulations are invalidated in their entirety, not as applied only to the plaintiffs; ensure that the Plaintiff States obtain complete relief for their injuries; and address the magnitude of the harms that will be inflicted on women, States, and the public interest nationwide.

“‘[W]hen a reviewing court determines that agency regulations are unlawful, the ordinary result is that the rules are vacated—not that their application to the individual petitioners is proscribed.’” Nat’l Mining Ass’n v. U.S. Army Corps of Eng’rs, 145 F.3d 1399, 1409 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (quoting Harmon v. Thornburgh, 878 F.2d 484, 495 n. 21 (D.C. Cir. 1989)). That settled rule follows directly from the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”), which empowers courts not only to “hold unlawful” but also to “set aside” legally infirm “agency action.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2). In accordance with that rule, the Third Circuit has frequently vacated regulations, in their entirety, that were not promulgated in compliance with the APA. See, e.g., Prometheus Radio Project v. FCC, 652 F.3d 431, 453-54 & n. 25 (3d Cir. 2011) (vacating FCC regulation that was not promulgated in compliance with the APA); Council Tree Communications, Inc. v. FCC, 619 F.3d 235, 258 (3d Cir. 2010) (same). As a consequence of vacatur, the invalidated regulations have no effect anywhere in the country, and regulations previously in force are reinstated. See Council Tree Communications, 619 F.3d at 258 (“vacating or rescinding invalidly promulgated regulations has the effect of reinstating prior regulations” (quoting Abington Mem. Hosp. v. Heckler, 750 F.2d 242, 244 (3d Cir. 1984))).

This approach accords with the practical reality that invalid federal regulations—like those at issue here—often inflict harm on a nationwide basis. As discussed, Defendants have identified employers in virtually every State in the country that will likely use the Rules to drop contraceptive coverage for their employees. See supra, at 7-10. Consequently, States across the country, including the Plaintiff States and the Amici States, will be forced to provide replacement contraceptive care and services through State programs or Medicaid plans or to provide healthcare associated with unintended pregnancies. See supra, at 10-12.

A preliminary injunction limited to the Plaintiff States, in contrast, would be inconsistent with the “ordinary” rule that invalid regulations must be vacated in their entirety. Nat’l Mining, 145 F.3d at 1409. It would create serious inequities for women employed by Hobby Lobby, Mersino Management Co., and other employers with locations in multiple States that are expected to drop contraceptive coverage. And it would not even provide “complete relief” to Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Madsen v. Women’s Health Ctr. Inc., 512 U.S. 753, 765 (1994) (quoting Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 702 (1979)). As discussed, thousands of Pennsylvania and New Jersey residents receive health insurance coverage through out-of-state employers. See supra, at 13-15. A preliminary injunction covering only those States would not protect these residents and would deprive Pennsylvania and New Jersey of “full relief” from the Rules, which are “illegal wherever...used.” McLendon v. Continental Can Co., 908 F.2d 1171, 1182 (3d Cir. 1990). The Plaintiff States have an interest in preventing the financial injury that will result if out-of-state employers use the Rules’ exemptions to drop coverage, causing residents to seek replacement coverage and care where they live: in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. And they have a further quasi-sovereign interest in protecting the health and wellbeing of their residents—including residents who work out-of-state. See Alfred L. Snapp & Sons, Inc. v. Puerto Rico, 458 U.S. 592, 597-98, 607-08 (1982) (recognizing Puerto Rico’s interest in protecting residents from discrimination by companies located in Virginia).

Finally, issuance of nationwide relief would be consistent with the “primary purpose of a preliminary injunction”—namely, “maintenance of the status quo until a decision on the merits of a case is rendered.” Acierno v. New Castle Cty., 40 F.3d 645, 647 (3d Cir. 1994). The Rules represent a departure from the status quo, which had both ensured that women retain seamless access to contraceptive coverage and accommodated sincerely held religious beliefs. A nationwide injunction would preserve the rights of the thousands of women across the country expected to lose to contraceptive coverage as a result of the Rules, as well as the rights of the States expected to assume the costs of their contraceptive care.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Amici States urge this Court to grant the Plaintiff States’ motion for a preliminary injunction and to bar enforcement of the Rules anywhere in the United States.

Total	7,173,998	-	4,407,494

² For each State on the list, the following is the FPL eligibility threshold for a broadly applicable program that is at least partially state funded: California—200%; Connecticut—263%; Delaware—250%; District of Columbia—215%; Hawaii—250%; Illinois—250%; Iowa—300%; Maine—214%; Maryland—250%; Massachusetts—300%; Michigan—250%; Minnesota—200%; Nevada—138%; New Jersey—250%; New Mexico—250%; New York—223%; North Carolina—200%; Oregon—250%; Pennsylvania—220%; Rhode Island—250%; Vermont—200%; Virginia—200%; Washington—260%. States may have programs that have higher FPL eligibility thresholds, including programs that are available to a narrower class of residents, for example the Children's Health Insurance Program ("CHIP") which extends eligibility above 300% FPL for women under the age of 19 in many States. See Kaiser Family Foundation, "Fact Sheet: Where Are States Today? Medicaid and CHIP Eligibility Levels for Children, Pregnant Women, and Adults," (2018), <http://files.kff.org/attachment/Fact-Sheet-Where-are-States-Today-Medicaid-and-CHIP-Eligibility-Levels-for-Children-Pregnant-Women-and-Adults>.

TABLE 2Number of Women with Employer-Sponsored Insurance Who Are Income Eligible for Medicaid as Secondary Payer for Contraceptive Services⁵

State	Insured, Income-Eligible Women Between the Ages of 15 and 45⁶	Percent of Enrollees Covered Under a Self-Funded Plan	Insured, Income-Eligible Women Between the Ages of 15 and 45 in Self-Funded Plans

Washington	160,796	57.4%	92,297
Total	1,745,194	-	1,212,166

⁵ The Medicaid program serves as a secondary payer for contraceptive services in each of the States listed in Table 2.

⁶ For all States listed in this table, the relevant Medicaid FPL used to calculate the figures is 138%, except the District of Columbia (215%).
