Patriots face knowns in match up with Steelers

By KYLE HIGHTOWER
The Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH—If there's been a blueprint to having success against the Patriots defense this season, it's started with running the football.

Seven times in 2018 New England has allowed an opponent to rush for 100 or more yards. On four of those occasions it's ended in a Patriots loss. In includes last week's 34-33 loss at Miami in which New England gave up a season-high 189 yards to the Dolphins prior to their miraculous final play.

"The run game's been something that we need to do a much better job of coaching, do a better job of playing," Patriots linebacker coach Brian Flores said. "Thumbs are going to keep running the ball or attempting to run the ball until we do something to stop it. Obviously, that's at the top of my priority list and our priority list as a defensive staff."

While it is an issue that will need to be corrected if the Patriots hope to go deep in the playoffs, they get a reprieve of sorts this week as they prepare for a trip to Pittsburgh.

This will be just the second time in five meetings since 2013 (regular season and playoffs) that New England won't be facing running back Le'Veon Bell, who last month refused to sign a one-year, $14.4 million franchise tender making him ineligible to play this season.

Bell also missed the 2015 regular season, leading with the Patriots while serving a two-game suspension for violating the league's substance abuse policy (The Steelers lost 28-21).

Pittsburgh hasn't beaten New England with Bell on Minnesota Vikings running back Dalvin Cook (33) runs against the New England Patriots. One of the Patriots' biggest weaknesses on defense this season has been containing opponents on the ground. New England has allowed 100 or more rushing yards seven times and is coming off giving up a season-high 189 in last week's loss at Miami. A trip to Pittsburgh is next, but for just the second time in five meetings the Patriots won't have to contend with Le'Veon Bell.

Pittsburgh started the season 1-2-1 before going on a six-game win streak that included four straight 100-yard rushing games by Bell's replacement James Conner.

That production has tailed off during the Steelers' current three-game losing streak, which has included losses to the Broncos, Chargers and Raiders.

Conner suffered an ankle injury against Los Angeles and sat out last week's loss to Oakland. His status is to be determined this week, though Tomlin hasn't ruled him out.

Pittsburgh is averaging 89 rushing yards per game, ranking 29th in the NFL. If Conner can't go, the primary rushing duties will fall to rookie Jaylen Samuels and former Patriot Stevan Ridley. But both are averaging just 2.6 yards per carry and have only one rushing touchdown between them.

New England's defense is ranked 15th in the NFL, allowing 113 rushing yards. It also hasn't allowed a 100-yard rusher in 10 straight games.

Patriots coach Bill Belichick said Samuels, listed as a tight end coming out of college, presents a unique challenge whenever he's on the field.

"He's a guy they try to get the ball to and they put him in a lot of different spots," Belichick said.

Numbers aside, Tomlin said he likes what he's seen from Samuels lately.

Manning not throwing as much

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—The New York Giants are making life easier for Eli Manning since the bye week.

After opening with a 1-7 record, Pat Shurmur's team has won four of five by doing all the little things that make a quarterback look good.

The offensive line, which was much maligned before the bye, has been reshaped and is protecting the two-time Super Bowl MVP better while opening holes for sensational rookie halfback Saquon Barkley to show his skills.

The defense has forced 12 turnovers in the five-game span, including 11 interceptions. And the pass rush, non-existent much of the season, has 10 sacks in the last two games after getting 14 in the first 11.

Put it all together and the Giants (6-0) still have a slim shot at making the playoffs heading into Sunday's game at MetLife Stadium against the Tennessee Titans (7-6).

All the talk about this being the 37-year-old Manning's final season as the starter also has died. It actually looks like he can be the starter for a few more years.

Manning said Wednesday the biggest difference since the bye has been the Giants' ability to run the ball. Barkley has rushed for at least 100 yards in the past four games, capped by a career-best 170 yards on 14 carries in the 40-16 win over Washington on Sunday.

Just an emphasis on running the ball, the play-action," Manning said. "A lot more under center. Not as much shotgun. Not as much seven-step drop. Just having everything built off the run game."

The success of the run has allowed Manning to cut back on his passes. The fewest he threw in the first eight games was 29 in a win over Houston.

New York Giants quarterback Eli Manning talks to reporters in East Rutherford, N.J., Wednesday. The Giants play the Tennessee Titans on Sunday at MetLife Stadium.

In the other seven, he put the ball in the air between 36 and 47 times.

In the current span, he has averaged 28.6 passes, with the highest total being 37 against Philadelphia, the only loss since the bye. Manning said making fewer throws doesn't reduce the pressure.

"You just want to go out there and do your job," Manning said. "We got to throw the ball. We got to throw it well. We got to run the ball. When you can do both, and depending on what the defense is doing, we can just adjust a little bit easier."

The offensive line has been a big plus in the past month. It allowed 31 sacks in the first eight games. Since adding Jamon Brown at right guard and Spencer Pailley at center a few weeks before that, the unit has allowed 12 sacks.

"Just being able to fire off and get that run game going, it can help all the play-actions," Manning said. "We're not in as many third downs for any obvious passing downs as we were early on, where the defense kind of can have a little bit of an advantage."
