

Houghton's Pond Recreation Area

The Department of Conservation and Recreation invites you to spend the day and enjoy the calm, clear waters of Houghton's Pond in the scenic Blue Hills Reservation. Twenty-four acres in size and up to 42 feet in depth, Houghton's Pond is a spring-fed kettle hole pond formed by receding glaciers approximately 10,000 years ago. The Massachusett Indians fished the pond and hunted the surrounding lands. From the colonial period through the late 1800's, several generations of the Houghton family farmed the area.

Today, the Houghton's Pond Recreation Area offers a variety of recreational activities including a seasonally supervised swimming beach, stocked fishing, 3 reservable picnic sites and 3 reservable ball fields. The bathhouse, comfort station and concession pavilion are open seasonally. The Visitor Center is open year round, with public restrooms.

The bathhouse includes 20 restrooms, 2 family changing rooms, terraced overlook, outdoor showers, first aid and lifeguard office. The comfort station includes 8 restrooms. A universally accessible interpretive boardwalk and path leads from the parking area to the beach, with views overlooking Marigold Marsh.
