

How To Create an Email Account

Creating an email account to access our online timber harvester trainings

To access our online timber harvester trainings, each person needs their own unique email address. We understand that many folks within the logging industry may use a single, shared work email address. Here is a step-by-step guide on how to sign up for your own email address. Once you have your own email address, you can register for the online timber harvester trainings. After registering, you will be emailed details about your account, which will allow you access to take these online trainings.

First, you'll need to decide what email provider you'd like to go with. You can get a free email address with Google, Yahoo, Microsoft Outlook, and Apple Mail. Which service works best for you might require a bit of online research on your end. In this document, we'll provide references on how to sign up for each of these services.

Some online articles show you how to sign up for a free email address, which could help you in your decision. We referenced this website in the creation of this document:
