ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This handbook is based on an original document developed in 1983 by the Nebraska Commission on the Status of Women and the Lincoln-Lancaster (NE) Commission on the Status of Women specifically for the National Association of Commissions for Women (NACW). NACW has granted permission for the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women to use the original guide as a basis for publication. This edition has been built upon by the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women, and now includes specific information pertaining to the development of its regional commissions.

The Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women (MCSW) would like to acknowledge the many individuals who volunteered their time and effort to contribute to this project. The 2020 edition was developed thanks to the dedication of MCSW Commissioners on the Regional Commission Handbook and Policies Ad-Hoc Committee, Jean Cotter Fox and Marydith Tuitt, Regional Commissioners from the Cape Cod and Islands, Tina Games, Linda Cebula, and Helen Bresnahan, and MCSW Program Director, Sasha Heggie-Jackson. Finally, we thank the courageous individuals who have chosen to begin a women's commission, as well as those who are already part of a commission. Your efforts continue to have a positive impact on women throughout the United States.

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

INTRODUCTION: A History of Women’s Commissions

“I wonder whether, in our society, women have the chance to use their powers, their full powers, intellectual powers, emotional powers, and all the rest, along the lines of excellence.” -- John F. Kennedy, 1963

When John F. Kennedy established the Presidential Commission on the Status of Women in 1961, he charged Chairwoman Eleanor Roosevelt with the responsibility of assessing the economic and social status of women in the United States at that time. Their research yielded The Presidential Report on American Women, a publication that raised awareness about the discrimination and sexism American women experienced in most areas of their lives. The report also brought to light the inequalities between women and men in the political, legal, and civil sectors, finally placing the plight of women at the forefront of the American psyche.

After the Presidential Commission dissolved in 1963 The National Association of Commissions for Women (NACW) was formed to take its place. Though the NACW still acts as a resource for over 50 states, county, and city commissions throughout the United States, President Kennedy’s musings about women’s powers still generate important questions to consider when forming a commission today. How do women use their different powers to achieve excellence in the community? Are there structures that prevent women from exercising this power? Identifying these obstacles will reveal where the commission is needed most and determine the role it will play in the community.

The Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women (MCSW) was inspired by the United Nations’ Fourth World Conference on Women held in September 1995 in Beijing, China. The conference directed state governments to "form and adequately fund Women’s Commissions in all states and territories where they do not already exist." Massachusetts’ delegates at the Beijing Conference, including then Massachusetts First Lady Susan Roosevelt Weld, returned determined that the state should have its own Women’s Commission. Ultimately, with the help of many, particularly state legislators, a unique and model Commission was created – with appointing authority shared by the Executive and Legislative branches.

A commission has the potential to serve as a forum for political advocacy, to provide the opportunity to liaise with other women’s organizations, to empower women who do not have the agency to advocate for themselves and to recognize and promote the accomplishments of strong women in the community. Women’s commissions have the potential to affect great social change and we hope you take full advantage of this opportunity.

On behalf of the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women, we wish you the best of luck with your commission and remind you that we are here as a resource should you have any questions or need guidance or support.

I. The Creation of MCSW Regional Commissions: The Legislative Process

MCSW History

Legislatively created in May 1998, the MCSW was inspired by the United Nations' Fourth World Conference on Women held in September 1995 in Beijing, China. The conference directed state governments to "form and adequately fund Women's Commissions in all states and territories where they do not already exist." Massachusetts' delegates at the Beijing Conference, including then Massachusetts First Lady Susan Roosevelt Weld, returned determined that the state should have its own Women's Commission.

Ultimately, with the help of many, particularly state legislators, a unique and model Commission was created – with appointing authority shared by the Executive and Legislative branches. Ever since, our 19 volunteer commissioners, staff, and interns have dedicated themselves to the promotion and protection of equality for women in all areas of their lives.

Since that time, MCSW has worked with legislators in various legislative sessions to create regional commissions via statute, to expand the reach of our mission "to advance women toward full equality in all areas of life, and to promote rights and opportunities for all women throughout their lives", and to engage with community leaders in all areas of the Commonwealth.

MCSW Regional Commissions

Modeled after the MCSW, the eleven unfunded MCSW regional commissions were legislatively created to study and report on the status of women in their geographical areas, and to provide permanent and effective voices for women. Each county and regional commission reports its findings annually to MCSW.

II. New Regional Commissions: Once Legislatively Established, What's Next?

New Commission Appointments

The specific number of commissioners and corresponding appointing authorities is described in a regional commission's enabling legislation. MCSW is the appointing authority for all regional commissions. MCSW will promote a call-for-applications when applicable (either during the annual application period of August-September, or on an as-needed basis). Candidates must complete an e-form (available on the MCSW website year-round) and must also send a resume either by uploading it with the application or sending it by email to the MCSW office. Once the applications have been received, it is the responsibility of MCSW's Program and Planning Committee to review the candidates and make a recommendation to MCSW's Full Commission to vote to appoint the appropriate number of commissioners.

In accordance with the mission of the MCSW to work towards the improvement of the status of all women in Massachusetts, the following attributes should be considered of potential appointees to regional commissions:

- The diversity of the applicant's background, especially as it pertains to race, ethnicity, religion, age, sexual orientation, gender identification, and socio-economic background;
- The experience of the applicant in working toward the improvement of the status of women in their region;
- The area of residence of the applicant, as it relates to the geographic diversity needs of the regional commission to which the applicant has applied.

Regional commissioners are issued initial terms staggered between one and three years. Commissioners are eligible to apply for reappointment to serve a second term, upon completion of their first term.

➤ See Appendix B for MCSW regional commissioner application form questions ➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 1b, for additional information on MCSW's Regional Commission first-time appointment procedure ➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 1d, for additional information on term limits

First Steps as a Regional Commissioner

The MCSW office will guide new regional commissions throughout the development of each of these steps.

Once regional commissioners have received official notice of their appointment, they must be sworn in by a Public Officer for the appointment to be official. The swearing-in process can be completed easily and quickly at the Secretary of State's Office in Boston; no appointment is necessary:

Secretary of State, Public Records Division
Office McCormack Building, 17th fl. Room 1719
1 Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108

Regional commissioners may also be sworn in closer to home by enquiring with their town/city clerk's office if they offer swearing-in services for commissioners of regional public bodies. Additionally, commissioners may consult this linked map for other swearing-in options. Calling ahead is advised, to ensure a Public Officer is still available at that location, and to ensure you have the requisite documentation. If the information on the linked map becomes out of date, the Public Records Division of the Secretary of State can be reached at 617-727-2836 or by email at comm@sec.state.ma.us and are able to give the most up to date information on commissioners to qualify public officers. Commissioners typically need to bring proof of appointment, in the form of the appointment letter issued by MCSW. MCSW cannot cover the cost of any swearing-in fees.

Training newly appointed commissioners will also be an important part of the establishment process. Once sworn-in, commissioners are required to complete two sets of ethics training:

1. Open Meeting Law

A regional commissioner should complete Open Meeting Law training within two weeks of her initial appointment (and reappointment) to a regional commission. Documentation of completed training (in the form of the certificate received upon completion) should be submitted to MCSW. Training may be arranged by visiting: <https://www.mass.gov/the-open-meeting-law>

2. Conflict of Interest

A regional commissioner should complete conflict of interest training within 30 days of her initial appointment to a regional commission. Regional commissioners should complete conflict of interest training every two years thereafter. Documentation of completed training (in the form of the certificate received upon completion) should be submitted to MCSW. Training may be arranged by visiting:

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

<https://www.mass.gov/online-conflict-of-interest-law-training>

➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 6, for additional information on MCSW's ethics requirements

Bylaws

One of the first tasks for a new commission is to draft a set of bylaws, which are the codes and regulations by which the commission will be governed. Researching examples of bylaws of existing MCSW regional commissions will help commissioners to begin thinking about how to draft a new set of bylaws. Be sure to consider the following themes when discussing the bylaws with the commission:

1. Authority and leadership positions
2. Definition and process of membership
3. Officers, staff, and committees
4. Structure and frequency of meetings
5. An outline of expected attendance/participation
6. Processes to amend the bylaws

If possible, receive the approval of all commissioners before officially accepting your bylaws. Furthermore, the bylaws are a living document and should be reviewed regularly to ensure they are still consistent with the commission's vision and goals.

➤ See Appendix C for sample bylaws

Commission Structure

Different leadership positions and committees exist within each commission to distribute responsibilities between commissioners.

Officers: One of the commission's first responsibilities as a new organization will be to elect commission officers. The positions typically created include chair/co-chairs, vice-chair, treasurer, and secretary, and the length of the term to be served should be predetermined by the commission. It is also important to consider the candidates' leadership qualities and commitment to the organization. Officers should also be willing to take on responsibilities, exercise authority, help with the long and short term planning of the commission, organize the efforts of others, and communicate effectively. Should an officer fail to fulfill these requirements, create a standard procedure for removing and replacing that officer. Clearly explaining the expectations and responsibilities of each position should prevent the need to dismiss any commissioners in a leadership position.

Committees: Creating committees to carry out specific projects may help the commission to run more smoothly and efficiently. Working in smaller groups also allows commissioners to cultivate their leadership skills, which can be useful for developing future officers and can make each member of the commission feel as if she is contributing directly to the organization. Commissioners should join committees based on the specific skills or interests they have to ensure that everyone in the committee is passionate about furthering the same cause. Sample committee titles include:

1. Legislative and Public Policy
2. Community Outreach
3. Advocacy and Special Issue Events
4. Program and Planning

Interns and Volunteers: It is at the discretion of the regional commission to seek out interns or volunteers. Neither interns nor volunteers have voting rights but may serve to assist in a regional commission expanding its reach and output.

Interns and volunteers are an excellent resource and allow for connections to be created between the commissioners and other women in the community. Having interns work alongside commissioners will help to develop the interns' understanding of women's issues and provide a platform to address these issues directly. Volunteers are also an important part of a commission's workforce, particularly for their ability to contribute to the commission on an ad-hoc basis and act as liaisons between the commission and the women they serve. Even if volunteers have not been appointed as commissioners, include their perspective by inviting them to serve on a standing committee or special topic advisory council (without voting rights), or to help with the commission's events.

MCSW Staff: Although the regional commissions set their own agenda in terms of programs and events, the MCSW staff and interns seek to support regional commissions by:

- Managing the regional commissioners appointment process
- Facilitating a formal inaugural event with the establishment of each new regional commission, consisting of a swearing in ceremony and an opening session/orientation
- Coordinating the semi-annual regional commission convening meetings
- Providing outreach, training, research, resources and informational updates regarding legislative advocacy opportunities and events of the state commission

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Regional Commission Liaison: Each regional commission is assigned a state commissioner from MCSW to act as their liaison. This liaison, typically a state commissioner who lives in the region, acts in complement to the MCSW office to provide support and advice to the regional commission. The relationship between liaison and regional commission has few parameters, and may be developed in accordance with the needs and desires of the regional commission. Some elements of the relationship may include (but are not limited to):

- Attending regional commission's meetings and events when liaison's schedule permits
- Working with regional commissions to ensure Open Meeting Law and code of ethics compliance (in collaboration with MCSW Program Director)
- Along with the MCSW Program Director, update regional commissions on MCSW and other regional commissions latest highlights/activities
- Reviewing monthly meeting minutes and escalating any issues or suggestions the regional commission have regarding communications with the MCSW, other regional commissions or within their own commissions to the MCSW Program Director

III. Existing Regional Commissions: Once Up and Running, What's Next?

New Commissioner Appointments

Over time, the need will arise to fill commissioner seats, be it from term expiration or commissioners stepping down. MCSW is the appointing authority for all regional commissions. MCSW will issue a call-for-applications when applicable (either during the annual application period of August-September, or on an as-needed basis). Candidates must complete an e-form (available on the MCSW website year-round) and must also send a resume either by attaching it to the e-form or by email to the MCSW office. It is the responsibility of MCSW's Program and Planning Committee to review the candidates and make a recommendation to MCSW's Full Commission to vote to appoint the appropriate number of commissioners.

Before the Program and Planning Committee issues its recommendation to the Full Commission, the Committee will share candidate application packets (résumé and application form) with existing commissioners of that region first, to invite their candidate feedback. All candidate feedback should be compiled on a single candidate rating sheet, and submitted to MCSW.

In accordance with the mission of the MCSW to work towards the improvement of the status of all women in Massachusetts, the following attributes should be considered of potential appointees to regional commissions:

- The diversity of the applicant's background, especially as it pertains to race, ethnicity, religion, age, sexual orientation, gender identification, and socio-economic background;
- The experience of the applicant in working toward the improvement of the status of women in her their region;
- The area of residence of the applicant, as it relates to the geographic diversity needs of the regional commission to which the applicant has applied.

Regional commissioners are issued initial terms depending on the regional commission seat they are appointed to fill. Regional commissioners who are offered a full 3-year initial term, are eligible to apply for reappointment to a second, 3-year term, for a total of six years served. Thereafter, they are not eligible for reappointment. Regional commissioners who are offered a shorter initial term (based on whose seat they are filling), are eligible to apply for reappointment to a second term, which would be a 3-year term. Thereafter, they are eligible to apply to a third term, as they have not yet completed six years of service. Thereafter, they are not eligible for reappointment.

New Commissioner Orientation

WOMEN

When welcoming a new commissioner aboard, remember to emphasize themes such as leadership skills, team building, communication, and the respectful and sensitive treatment of all members and issues addressed by the commission. Provide everyone with a new commissioner manual, which will also serve as a guide for the orientation. The manual could be an extension of this handbook, but with additional regional commission-specific information that could fall under the following headings below. It should cover, at a minimum, the following topics to ensure that all new commissioners understand their roles and responsibilities to the commission:

1. Overview of the MCSW and specific regional commission
2. Mission statement
3. History of regional commission
4. Legislation (establishing act and bylaws)
5. Regional commission structure
6. Regional commissioner and appointing authorities contact information

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

7. Swearing-in information
8. Calendar and meeting schedule
9. Registration and commitment forms
10. Office organization and procedures
11. Program and event planning

If it is not included in the establishing legislation, create a membership policy to discuss at the new commissioner orientation. Successful membership policies pay attention to the length of service, reappointment procedures, measures for the rotation of commissioners and committees, and commissioner evaluation. These policies will ensure that commissioners clearly understand their responsibilities to the organization and the weight carried by their appointments.

Orientation also presents a good opportunity to gather basic information for each commissioner's file. Ask the commissioners to bring a résumé or a curriculum vitae, or, if these are unavailable, create a form to get information about each commissioner's educational background, volunteer positions, civic involvement, professional experience, special interests and skills, and contact information.

Reappointment

As a regional commissioner approaches the end of her term (December 31st), by October 1st of the relevant year, she needs to decide whether or not she would like to apply for reappointment to another term (if eligible). Please note: This is not an automatic process. The MCSW reserves the right to deny reappointment requests. The Chair must communicate reappointment requests to MCSW, the appointing authority, who will assess them in much the same way as first-time appointments. Once the reappointment requests have been received, it is the responsibility of MCSW's Program and Planning Committee to review the reappointment candidates and make a recommendation to MCSW's Full Commission to vote on whether or not to reappoint the commissioners.

➤ See *MCSW Policy Document, Section 1c, for additional information on MCSW's regional commissioner reappointment process

Regional Commission Liaison

Each new regional commission is assigned a state commissioner from MCSW to act as their liaison. This liaison, typically a state commissioner who lives in the region, acts in complement to the MCSW office to provide support, advice and leadership to the regional commission. The relationship between liaison and regional commission has few parameters, and may be developed in accordance with the needs and desires of the regional commission. Some elements of the relationship may include (but are not limited to):

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

- Serving as a point of contact for the regional commission to the state commission (in addition to the MCSW office)
- Attending regional commission's meetings and events when liaison's schedule permits
- Providing updates from the MSCW regarding potential commissioner applicants to the regional commissions
- Working with regional commissions to ensure Open Meeting Law and code of ethics compliance
- Along with the MCSW staff, updating regional commissions of MCSW and other regional commission latest highlights/activities
- Reviewing monthly meeting minutes and escalating any issues or suggestions the regional commission have regarding communications with the MCSW, other regional commissions or within their own commissions
- Working with regional commissions to cosponsor annual MCSW public hearings that are in their region
- Managing Advocacy Day visits so that legislators in specific regions are covered by regional commissioners and/or MCSW commissioners

Current regional commission liaisons (subject to change):

IV. Organization and Operations

Creating an Annual Calendar

It is recommended that regional commissioners should compile a calendar of all the commission's meetings and events for the next fiscal year. Choosing a consistent meeting time for each meeting can be one of the most helpful decisions when creating the calendar. For example, the whole commission might meet the third Wednesday every month while a standing committee might meet the second Wednesday every month. Providing a consistent meeting day will guarantee a greater rate of attendance at meetings.

It is also helpful to consider including the following meetings and events when planning your calendar:

1. Full Commission Meetings
2. Committee Meetings
3. International and National Women's Events, such as Equal Pay Day, Women's History Month, and International Women's Day
4. Planning Sessions
5. Commission Events, such as advocacy days, legislative breakfasts, annual fundraisers
6. Public Hearings (MCSW's and regional commission's)
7. New Member Training
8. Semi-annual convenings with MCSW (2x)

When planning the calendar, consider any conflicts which might arise for predetermined meeting days. Take note of federal, state, and religious holidays and be mindful of any commissioners with children whose school calendars could create conflicts. Submit a draft of the calendar to the chair and seek her approval before distributing it to the rest of the commissioners.

Meetings

Meetings are essential to the operation of any commission because they provide the opportunity for commissioners to work together and assess the status of the commission, brainstorm new ideas to address regional issues, and create solutions to any problems which might arise. Most commissions see a strong partnership develop as they work together to accomplish collective goals. Regular meetings allow members to establish a close working relationship and create a positive force for both the internal strength and public reputation of the organization. In addition to forging this partnership, perhaps the most important function of commission meetings is the opportunity to plan for future action.

A marker of any commission's success is certainly its ability to have positive, concrete effects on the lives of women in its area of jurisdiction, an act which can be accomplished by anything from advocating for pertinent legislation to honoring strong women in the community. Therefore, the most critical component of any meeting is that ideas are not left behind in the boardroom but are given life and brought to action to fulfill the commission's vision. To go one step further, consider combining meetings with actions or events such as public hearings or legislative breakfasts.

A few days before a meeting is set to occur, the chair (or another designated representative) should remind commissioners of the date, time, and location of the upcoming meeting. Discuss the issues to be addressed and the decisions to be made at the meeting to emphasize why their attendance and participation is so important. Assigning tasks to each commissioner beforehand will also guarantee the efficiency of the meeting and make them feel directly involved in the planning process.

Creating a clear and informative agenda will also help your meeting to run as smoothly as possible. The agenda should be distributed to all attendees a week prior to the meeting and should be posted in a public location. Obtaining the agenda ahead of time will allow commissioners to be prepared for the discussions and decisions to be made at the meeting, as well as providing a time frame for how long each item will be discussed. On a technical note, the agenda should also include the date, time and location of the meeting and, if possible, the same information for the following meeting. When drafting an agenda, consider including the following items:

1. Roll Call
2. Approval of Previous Meeting Minutes
3. Chair's Report
4. Director / Staff Report
5. Committee Reports
6. Old Business
7. New Business
8. Reminder of Future Meetings and Events

During the meeting the chair will moderate discussion, keep the meeting within time constraints, and encourage the participation of all attendees. The chair should begin by calling the meeting to order and then introducing and welcoming guests and new members. Make sure everyone has an agenda and briefly review it before beginning to provide a foundation for participation. During discussion, the secretary (or another designated representative) will record minutes of the conversation.

It is also useful to have a set of rules for the conduct of meetings which will help all members understand the most effective way to voice her or his opinion. Obtaining a copy of Robert's Rules of Order is a good place to start for learning how to make the most of commission meetings. The chair should adjourn the meeting after the entire agenda has been covered and all discussions have reached an appropriate conclusion in the context of the meeting. After the meeting, distribute the minutes as soon as possible to all commissioners and guests who attended the meeting, and submit them for the chair's approval. Keep all the commission's minutes on file for future reference.

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Open Meeting Law

The democratic process depends on the public having knowledge about the considerations underlying governmental action. Therefore, Open Meeting Law requires that most meetings of public bodies be held in public.

As a local public body, regional commission meetings are governed by Open Meeting Law. Basic (non-exhaustive) requirements mandate:

1. Public bodies post notice of meetings at least 48 hours in advance of the meeting (excluding Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays)
2. The meeting notice must be filed with the municipal clerk in each city and town within the district. As an alternative method of notice, a regional public body may post a meeting notice on the regional public body's website.
3. The meeting notice must include the date, time and location of the meeting, as well as a list of topics to be covered at the meeting (with enough specificity to give the public an understanding of each topic that will be discussed).
4. A quorum must be present at each commission meeting for deliberation to occur. A "quorum" is defined as "a simple majority of the members of the public body".
5. Any communication between or among a quorum of a public body on any matter within its jurisdiction must be conducted during a noticed meeting.
6. Public bodies must create and approve minutes of all meetings, including executive sessions, in a timely manner. Minutes must list the names of the members present or absent.

V. Issue Identification and Advocacy

MCSW Legislative Agenda

Each legislative session (every two years beginning in odd numbered years, e.g., 2019, in Massachusetts), the state commission, MCSW, selects a number of priority bills to advocate for on their journey through the State House. These bills speak to our mission and purpose, and address what we've discovered are some of Commonwealth women's greatest challenges at our four- annual regional public hearings. MCSW's Legislative and Public Policy Committee endorses and tracks legislation to achieve these goals. MCSW also meets with legislators and submits written and verbal testimony in support of priority legislation at state legislative hearings.

MCSW's current list of legislative priorities may be viewed on our website: Regional commissions are encouraged to support and advocate for these legislative priorities, but are also encouraged to develop their own legislative priorities, as they relate to their region.

As a government entity which uses its resources for political advocacy, a women's commission has political influence but must use this power intelligently. In the simplest sense, women's commissions exist to give all women a permanent, effective voice and full equality in all areas of their lives. The causes or legislation the commission chooses to support should be non-partisan to ensure that publicly provided resources are being used to help as many women as possible.

➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 4, for additional information on MCSW's regional commission issue identification and advocacy policy

Identifying Issues: Public Hearings

To make the commission's advocacy work as effective as possible, identify issues which specifically affect women in the community. Holding a public hearing is an excellent way to gain a better understanding of the real obstacles currently confronted by women. These meetings are open to the public and provide individuals with the opportunity to share their concerns with the commission via testimony.

Begin planning a few months in advance by securing a location large enough to accommodate the anticipated audience. Find a space in which the hearing can be held free of charge, like a public library, town hall or community college. Confirm ahead of time if there is a microphone at the location.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

Reach out to a variety of individuals and organizations who you would like to see attend the hearing by sharing a flier via email. The flier should be simply designed, easy to read, and contains all the necessary information about the date, time, location and theme of the hearing. Consider also contacting local legislators, your MCSW commission liaison and those who served as commissioners in the past. A flier may be posted on regional commission social media pages, and may also be posted around the town or city in which the hearing will be held, as well as those nearby. Legislators should be contacted with a phone call a few weeks after any initial email invite to remind them about the hearing. Other potential attendees should be followed up with a week after the initial contact was made.

In addition to individual contacts, make the event known to a larger audience through local media such as newspapers, radio, and cable access stations. Alert these media outlets of the time, date and location of the hearing by writing a press release and/or media advisory and distributing it two weeks before the hearing.

Also consider that some cities or towns will have multilingual populations and it may be worthwhile to translate flyers into those different languages to reach as large of an audience as possible. If commissioners do not have translation capabilities, reach out to the contact person at the hearing location to find out more information about the different languages spoken in the region and to see if she or he has any suggestions for places to find translators.

When the day of the hearing arrives, set up a long table at the front of the room for the commissioners and a smaller table or desk facing the commissioners for those testifying, plus rows of chairs for the audience. Have a sign-in table at the location's entrance, and make sure to add the attendee's names to a contact list later, so they can be informed of future hearings or events in their area. A commission could also provide a printed one-pager at the sign-in table, describing a brief synopsis of the regional commission's goals and activities.

During the hearing, invite community members to testify before the commissioners and to share their issues or concerns about the status of women in their community, encouraging women from all backgrounds to share their stories to create a dialogue which includes the entire audience. The commission should designate a note-taker to transcribe the hearing for the hearing report. Before attendees leave the hearing, distribute a survey to get feedback about the meeting and to provide women with an opportunity to inform the commission of any issues about which they were not able to testify.

After the hearing has finished, combine the survey results and the transcript of the meeting in the hearing report. Additionally, look for any mention of the hearing in local media and contact newspapers which published stories about the hearing and share on commission social media pages.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Send thank you notes to the contact person at the hearing location, legislators and all who attended the event. Within a month of the hearing, distribute a hearing report to all attendees, legislators, and other individuals who could benefit from the information learned during the hearing.

Public hearings can take a significant amount of planning, but done over the course of a few months it is a very manageable process. It is a deeply rewarding and informative event, when the commission can hear directly from its constituents about the most pertinent issues in their lives, and use this as a basis to inform their regional legislative priorities.

Advocacy Efforts

Once a commission has identified the issue(s) they want to help improve in their region, advocacy comes into play. It is recommended that the commission arrange an advocacy training session for all commissioners, especially those interested in lobbying on behalf of the commission. Begin with a clear explanation of the overall structure of the legislature including the different leadership positions and current legislators of the region. Consider bringing in a speaker to advocacy training sessions who has lobbying experience (MCSW may be able to point regional commissions in the right direction for this resource).

In short, impactful lobbying comes from familiarity with the legislators and having a clear understanding of the issues at hand. Try to see legislators as allies and enter with the mindset that the commission will be working with, rather than against, her or him. Know her or his past stance on important issues and make sure to follow up with any legislators after a visit. When a legislator takes positive action on the commission's behalf, be sure to thank her or him for supporting the organization.

An Advocacy Guide can be found on the MCSW website:
https://www.mass.gov/service- details/advocacy-day

Another way to strengthen advocacy efforts is to bring together various women's groups to form a coalition which can advocate for women's issues addressed by the commission.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Creating a directory of women's organizations to build a network of friends and advocates in the region increases the commission's ability to take action and will provide potential contacts for the caucus. Once a coalition has been established task forces can be created to plan specific actions for the issues on which the commission would like to focus, remembering that sometimes it is better to focus on a smaller, more manageable portion of a larger issue which should be addressed over the course of months or years.

Navigating the Political System

It is important to understand the political system of the area your commission will be serving so it can be used as much to the commission's advantage as possible. Familiarize commissioners with the local lawmakers and attend events at which they will be speaking, such as candidate nights or forums, to learn about their stances on women's issues. Send legislators questions ahead of time so they can research the issues the commission feels are most pressing for women in the area.

Another method of staying up to date on the current state of important legislation is to hold a forum in which the commission can directly interact with legislators who support a relevant bill. When the legislature is in session, invite a legislator to speak with the commission and interested community members, allotting time for both discussion of the issue, as well as questions and answers. Direct contact with legislators will be essential in making progress on any legislation the commission would like to see passed.

VI. Programs and Events

MCSW Programs and Events

MCSW has developed an agenda of annual programming and events including Commonwealth Heroines, formerly known as Unsung Heroine (each June at the Massachusetts State House in Boston), Women's Advocacy Day (each May at the Massachusetts State House in Boston), and four regional public hearings. The regional commissions are an integral part of helping to make sure these events are a success in a variety of ways.

**recently launched girls initiative****

MCSW holds public hearings around the Commonwealth each year. The purpose of the regional public hearings is to give community stakeholders the opportunity to discuss issues and concerns important to women, as well as the gaps or barriers they have experienced in the provision of services available in the region. Regional commissions of each hearing location are invited to co-host the public hearing with MCSW, promote it on their social media pages, and do outreach in their region to increase attendance. The locations of MCSW hearings are reflected on the state website:

<https://www.mass.gov/service-details/public-hearings>.

Advocacy day is an annual event held by the MCSW to advocate for legislation that advances the rights and opportunities of women. The MCSW welcomes 250 community activists, including regional commissioners, to attend and participate in Advocacy Day, and stand in support of women throughout Massachusetts. Attendees hear from the MCSW Chair, Regional Commission Chairs, and State Legislators via a speaking program that discusses key findings from the previous year, and lays out MCSW legislative priorities for the coming session. The event includes time for commissioners and community activists to visit legislators to discuss priority legislation.

In addition to set programming, MCSW participates in other programs as they arise and are relevant to MCSW's mission. For example, as part of equal pay advocacy in 2018, MCSW has partnered with the Treasurer's Office of Economic Empowerment, the AAUW and MA Community Colleges to provide salary negotiation training and facilitation across the Commonwealth.

See more at: <https://www.mass.gov/service-details/salary-negotiation-workshops-2018>

As appropriate, MCSW will share information regarding these additional programs to regional commissions.

Planning Events with a Purpose

Other than participating in MCSW events, one of the best ways for regional commissions to connect with regional supporters and spread the word about the commission is to hold a public event. During the planning stages of any event, remember to ask how the commission's efforts will benefit women in the community and if there is anything that can be done to welcome even more women and provide them with the opportunity to gain something from the event. The type of event should reflect the commission's goals and what is hoped to be accomplished by bringing together members of the community.

Types of Events

Ceremonies honoring or celebrating individuals and groups in the community can be an important component of the commission's outreach efforts. Consider honoring successful women or girls in the community or celebrating a national event such as Women's History Month or Women's Equality Day. Awareness events are also very worthwhile to organize and will help to spread the word about important issues affecting women in the community, such as domestic violence or the wage gap between women and men. Swearing-in ceremonies for new regional commissioners are also a nice way to bring the commission together to welcome a new member and orient her to the commission.

If the commission is looking for a more structured event, conferences and symposia are also an effective method of facilitating discussion between individuals and organizations with regards to a specific regional topic. Conferences and symposia differ from awareness events in that they are often on a much larger scale and require more planning but bring together a greater number of attendees. Networking events are also a good way to gather large crowds, especially to establish professional connections, build coalitions, and to coordinate advocacy efforts. Events specifically coordinated for networking can vary greatly in size, ranging from a roundtable discussion to a larger conference-sized gathering.

It is important to connect some sort of public relations effort with any commission event because it not only raises further awareness about the issues at hand and likely increases attendance, but also establishes the commission as having a strong community presence.

Basic Event Planning Tips

Depending on the scale of the event planning can begin anywhere from one year to a few months in advance, even if the initial stages are simply brainstorming about the purpose of the event, how many people will attend, creating a planning committee, and what sort of resources and skill- sets are necessary.

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

The next step will be to select a venue, keeping in mind the type of space which will be most conducive to the event. Public spaces, such as government buildings or community centers, typically provide space for the event free of charge. Some other important venue considerations are the size, location relative to public transportation, the date and time of the event, and if there will be audio and visual equipment available. At this stage, it will also be important to have a rough idea of how many guests will attend so the venue will be guaranteed to accommodate everyone.

Once the guest list is finalized begin to think about invitations for the event. Request that guests RSVP so the committee can plan for enough space to be available during the event. When inviting elected officials, seek out those who are most relevant to your event in terms of local, state, or national politics. Provide them with information about the event, and follow up as the event gets closer to remind them of their anticipated attendance.

Around the same time invitation flyers are emailed, begin to the public relations campaign for the event. Place ads in local newspapers, utilize social media, and create flyers to post in areas where potential attendees are likely to see them. (For more ideas about public relations, see the next chapter on “Communication and Outreach”.)

Finally, begin to search for volunteers early enough so there will be enough time to recruit sufficient help for the event. Contact anyone who has volunteered for the commission in the past and ask them to help recruit more volunteers. Make sure to train the volunteers before the event, providing them with all the information they will need to be as helpful to the attendees as possible. Every event is unique and will require its own specific timeline, but keeping these general planning stages in mind will facilitate a successful and well-coordinated event.

VII. Communication and Outreach: Promoting

Your Commission

Spearheading a Public Relations Campaign

The key to a successful public relations campaign is to understand the audience. Targeting a specific demographic will elicit a larger and more positive response, resulting in greater support for the commission. Consider an approach which utilizes different kinds of media to reach the greatest number of people possible.

Major commission events, such as the induction of new commissioners, will make for the most newsworthy stories. The tone of the story should appropriately reflect the nature of the news source, and if a piece is intended as an exclusive, do not offer it to more than one news source. Alert the media early enough so they will time the release of your story to coincide with the event. Prepare a detailed fact sheet, media advisory, or press release to distribute to media personnel and agree to be quoted if appropriate.

➤ See Appendices E and G for sample press releases

➤ See Appendix H for a sample media advisory

Print Media

It is very important to consider the audiences of different types of newspapers because the content of a newspaper usually depends on how widely the newspaper is circulated. Larger newspapers are more likely to report matters which reach a wider audience such as the election of officers, new programs, and notable policy actions. Conversely, smaller daily and weekly newspapers are more interested in local news such as the appointment of commissioners or meeting announcements.

Writing a weekly newspaper column is also worth considering especially because newspapers are accustomed to paying for syndicated feature columns and might welcome free articles. Opinion pieces, editorials, and letters to the editor are also useful methods of sharing information about women's issues or upcoming events. If the commission has chosen to work on an ongoing series of articles or editorials, consider meeting with the editorial board of a newspaper to discuss the project.

Remind reporters to attend important events by sending out a media advisory the day before the event, or send a press release to reporters who might not be able to attend. When writing a press release be sure to emphasize the most significant aspect of the story in the first paragraph. The rest of the press release or media advisory should include the "who," "what," "where," "when," and "why" of the event. Provide background information where appropriate but keep the story as concise as possible.

Newsletters are another form of print or electronic media which will benefit any public relations effort and are used to inform the public about the commission's most recent events and accomplishments. General information about the state of women in the city, county, or state served by the commission can also be included and will allow the newsletter to serve as a valuable resource for establishing connections with individuals and organizations which might want to support you in the future.

Websites and Social Media

The state commission website can be found at: www.mass.gov/women. It hosts all pertinent programs and advocacy information relating to MCSW. On it, MCSW hosts a simple webpage for each regional commission. These web pages can be found at: https://www.mass.gov/service- details/regional-commissions. Each web page features:

- An image of the area of regional commission coverage
- A list of current regional commissioners
- Contact information for the commission (either the chair's email or, if available, a general email address)
- Links to regional commission website (if applicable) and social media pages
- Link to apply to the regional commission (when applicable)
- Regional commission annual reports

A regional commission may also create a website of their own but are currently responsible for the costs associated with developing it. Creating an informational, easy-to-navigate website is one of the most important resources for those trying to learn about the work performed by the commission. The ubiquity of the internet means a well-planned website is now more important than ever and will create connections with a far wider audience than any newspaper or television show possibly could. The website should include basic information about the commission, links to other local women's commissions, basic facts about the legislation supported by the commission, a calendar with information about upcoming events and recent publications, especially annual reports.

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Social media platforms such as Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and LinkedIn are also an effective way to connect with potential supporters. A Facebook page or profile will help the commission to establish a more permanent internet presence and provides the opportunity to record the organization's mission, post pictures, create links to events, and provide updates to other users who view the page. Twitter is more effective for the dissemination of brief announcements or reminders for upcoming events. LinkedIn is similar to Facebook in that it allows the commission to connect with other users, but these interactions emphasize networking and professional interactions rather than the more informal information usually posted on Facebook.

Maintaining a blog is another method of promoting the commission but with greater freedom than the rigid templates of social media platforms. The ability to self-publish in the format of a blog allows for contributions from various commissioners, in addition to providing the flexibility to write posts ranging from summaries of commission events to op-ed style pieces about the status of women in the community.

➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 3a, for additional information on MCSW's regional commission website and social media policy

Social Media Ethics Guidelines

As MCSW and all regional commissions are non-partisan organizations governed by Ethics law, there are strict rules regarding partisanship, and representation as a commissioner on social media and in commissioner correspondence. In short, regional commissioners must not participate in any kind of political endorsement (for or against), fundraising activity (meaning collecting the money), or unethical conduct. This policy covers all parts of regional commission operations, from meetings, to events, to social media postings from official accounts – all communications under the commission name (or a commissioner using their title) are subject to state Ethics policy.

This does not mean that a commissioner cannot be a member or even a leader of a partisan organization, just that she has to keep the two activities completely separate from her role as commissioner. Also, this is not to say that a regional commission is unable to work alongside organizations that uphold a partisan agenda; however, a role as a commission/commissioner in cooperation with any partisan group should be for a strictly non-partisan matter and that needs to be made clear.

Further, commissioners may not use their individual title as a commissioner to post online, send correspondence through email, or any other communication in a partisan manner. Personal emails should not include the title of commissioner in the signature unless being used at that time for official commission duties. If the title of commissioner is being used in an email signature, no other titles should be used additionally.

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Please refer to the State Ethics Commission's Advisory on Public Employee Political Activity and use it as a resource in governing regional commission posts and activities:

<http://www.mass.gov/ethics/education-and-training-resources/educationalmaterials/advisories/advisory-11-1.html>

If regional commissions are unsure about any communication or public posting, please feel free to reach out to the MCSW office for guidance and clarification at mcsw@state.ma.us

➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 6b, for additional information on MCSW's conflict of interest and partisanship policy

➤ See Appendix J for a letter from MCSW to regional commissioners on social media ethics

Radio and Television

Cable television and certain radio shows are also an effective means of reaching a wider audience. Public access programming on cable television is specifically designed to serve the local community and provides an opportunity to reach an audience which has a vested interest in local events. Public service programs offer a more personal approach to media outreach when commissioners are interviewed about the commission's work or a particular piece of legislation. Another consideration should be public service announcements, which would allow the commission to inform listeners and viewers about a variety of women's issues without having to purchase airtime.

Speakers Bureau

If there are commissioners who enjoy public speaking and would like to donate their time outside of commission meetings, the state-level MCSW Speakers Bureau is an excellent way to utilize their talents. Speakers should be well-versed in a few predetermined topics, such as the history of the commission and the most current women's issues, and should be prepared to provide informational talks about these topics when requested to do so. If you have a speaking opportunity as a commissioner, or are interested in participating in the MCSW Speakers Bureau, please contact MCSW at mcsw@state.ma.us

➤ See MCSW Policy Document, Section 3f, for additional information on MCSW's Speakers Bureau policy

VIII. Fundraising and Finances

Funding to Support Programming

The majority of the regional commission's charge may be supported by partnerships and in-kind donations. And yet there are some instances where funding will be necessary or required.

The regional commissions may accept and solicit funds, including any gifts, donations, grants, or bequests, or any state and/or federal funds for the purpose of advancing its mission. These funds will be deposited in an account housed by the State Comptroller and managed by the MCSW staff.

Presently Berkshire, Cape and Islands, Eastern Regional, Hampshire-Franklin, MetroWest, Plymouth, and Upper Middlesex Commissions have enabling language that permits separate state managed accounts to be established. In contrast, the enabling language for the Bristol, Essex, Worcester, Hampden Commissions is silent on this question. This conflict has no bearing on directions laid out in the Handbook or Policies. Regardless of the inconsistencies in enabling legislation language, MCSW has developed procedures so all regional commissions will be able to raise, receive, and expend funds to support the effort of advancing the mission.

Funding from the MCSW

The MCSW may provide funding in the form of annual stipends and project grants. On an annual basis the MCSW, with guidance from the Budget and Personnel Committee, will determine the amount of funds to be allocated and how funds will be distributed. This will be communicated to the regional commission, and application directions will be provided.

Reasonable operating expenses covered by any stipend may include, but are not limited to banner, table cloth, business cards, name tags, table tents, promotional materials, flyers, brochures.

MCSW encourages regional commissions to use environmentally friendly, digital solutions (e.g. Facebook, Twitter) for marketing/programmatic efforts and community outreach development.

The MCSW has in the past and will continue to provide to each of the regional commissions a membership to the National Association of Commissions for Women and commissioner specific nametags. Additional items may be added to this list of resources provided uniformly to the regional commission.

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

Funding from third parties

In addition, funds may be solicited from third party donors. Donors and grantees should be vetted by regional commissions to ensure that there is no conflict of interest or organizational objective.

Developing budgets and fundraising goals

Regional commissions should prioritize their legislative charge—to study all matters concerning women and recommending policy changes—and consider how partnerships may effectively advance the mission. Partners may include a sister women’s commission as well as community non-profits, government entities, and business with a shared mission. When supplemental funding is necessary, budgets should be developed to effectively and most efficiently support desired and well-defined programming. The MCSW takes into consideration the above when reviewing grant proposals.

Reporting

A complete and accurate reporting of budgets and expenses should be included in the commission’s annual report submitted to the MCSW each May 1. There should be information regarding the impact of the funding on the specific project and overall goals of the regional commission.

- See MCSW Policy Document, Section 5, for additional information on the fundraising and finance policy for regional commissions
- See Appendix K for the notice regarding FY19 MCSW grant applications
- See MCSW Policy Document, Section 6, for additional information on ethics considerations relating to regional commission funding opportunities
- See Appendix L for sample grant proposal application questions

IX. Commission Evaluation

Evaluating the Commission

Once the commission has established a presence, it is important to take a step back and evaluate how effectively the commission is addressing the needs of women in the community. Yearly evaluations are a good measure of the commission's progress as well as the improvements which need to be made in the future. Furthermore, keeping records of the commission's yearly progress will allow future commissioners to understand the organization's history and how it can be strengthened to serve even more women. The following two sections describe important methods of evaluation which every commission should undertake for a comprehensive review of its work.

Annual Reports

Regional commissions are required to submit an annual report to MCSW on May 1 each year, summarizing the commission's accomplishments during the year and its goals for the future.

A good place to begin is by assessing the previous year's annual report (if applicable) and deciding which aspects were successful and in which ways the next report can be improved. Additionally, discussing major objectives for the report before beginning to write will allow contributors to understand the big picture. Consider focusing on a specific theme to ensure the report's continuity by emphasizing certain aspects of the commission's work during the year, such as community involvement or new programs initiated by the commission. At a minimum the report should have a comprehensive picture of the commission's accomplishments to-date and goals.

When the report is complete, distribute it to MCSW, fellow regional commissioners, and local women's organizations. Additionally, send copies to the National Association for Commissions on Women (NACW) and the Department of Labor Women's Bureau. Finally, upload the report to the commission's website (if applicable) to share with an even larger audience.

➤ See Appendix M for a sample regional commission annual report

Annual Planning Sessions

Once the annual report has been completed the entire commission should come together to discuss the report and, more generally, to assess the previous year and brainstorm ways to improve the commission during the upcoming year. Because many of the materials presented at the planning session will be long term projects such as the annual report and the yearly calendar, plan enough time to have these projects completed in time for the session. The planning session also presents an opportunity to hold commission elections, so be sure to include a ballot in the materials. Also consider including next year's commissioner commitment forms, and commission evaluations if it is necessary to gather concrete feedback from the commissioners regarding the current state of the commission. A standard planning session agenda should include the following:

COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

1. Introduction and Welcome
2. Elections
3. Old Business
4. Review and Planning (discuss events, programs, and hearings)
5. Planning for Next Year (brainstorming, goal setting)
6. Individual Committee Meetings
7. Review of Goals for Next Year
8. Closing Remarks

Holding an annual planning session will allow the commission to evaluate its progress and what still needs to be done for the future. Taking a step back and assessing whether or not the commission is truly meeting its goals and fulfilling its mission statement will allow the organization to work with a clearer focus in the coming year, remembering why they do the work they do and ensuring that their work benefits as many women from as many backgrounds as possible.

Letter to Regional Commission Charis Regarding Social Media Ethics

July 20, 2017

Hello Regional Chairs and Co-Chairs:

We are delighted to see the growth and progress of our Regional Commissions. Alongside this growth comes the use of social media and other applications to spread information. Unfortunately, we have discovered that we need to discuss ethics and blurred lines with all of the Regional Commissions on the usage of social media platform pages and how each Commissioner represents themselves while using the Commissioner title.

Each and every one of our commissions is a non-partisan body, meaning a commission (or a commissioner in her official capacity) cannot and should not participate in any kind of political endorsement, fundraising activity (meaning collecting the money), or unethical conduct. This policy is true of all parts of your commission's operations, from meetings, to events, to social media postings. Because your official websites, Facebook pages, Twitters, and all other accounts are associated with the commission name, you are subject to compliance with relevant state policies, including harassment and discrimination, confidentiality, ethics rules, code of conduct, state Ethics Law, Federal Copyright law, and other applicable laws and regulations.

Two types of issues have been brought to our attention recently. The first has to do with the prohibition against endorsement of any candidate for political office, ballot question, or political party. This also means commissions (and commissioners in their official capacity) cannot oppose any candidate, ballot question or political party. As an example, if any elected official introduces a bill which might be detrimental to women, it is permissible for a commission to voice opposition to the bill (within the limits of appropriate behavior and language, of course); but it is not permissible to advocate against said elected official's re-election because of that bill. Another problem is created when a commission (or a commissioner acting in her official role) associates with a partisan organization in such a manner as to blur the lines between the two groups – giving the impression that the commission supports the other organization's partisan agenda. An example would be a commissioner signing a letter to a legislator in support or opposition of a bill and signing both as a commissioner and as a member of the partisan organization – or even co-signing any letter or email with a partisan organization. When using email, commissioners should only include their title as a commissioner when the email is used for an official communication. This means that personal emails should not include the title of commissioner in the signature unless being used at that time for official commission duties. One final activity which may be approaching the line is when a commission's official Facebook page or Twitter account shares a post from a partisan organization, even when the post itself is not partisan, because many people seeing the post will follow it back to the original partisan web site and possibly assume commission support for that partisan agenda. If there is a question, it is best to err on the side of caution.

This does not mean that a commissioner cannot be a member or even a leader of a partisan organization, just that she has to keep the two activities completely separate. And this is not to say that a commission is unable to work alongside organizations that uphold a partisan agenda; however, your role as a Commissioner in cooperation with any partisan group should be for a strictly non-partisan matter and that needs to be made clear. You may not post on your commission Facebook page in support of a single candidate for office, but rather may post in support of all women running for office. You may not use your individual title as a commissioner to post online, send correspondence through email, or any other communication in a partisan manner. All of your communications under the commission's name are subject to this state Ethics policy.

Please take a look at the State Ethics Commission's Advisory on Public Employee Political Activity :

<http://www.mass.gov/ethics/education-and-trainingresources/educationalmaterials/advisories/advisory-11-1.html>

and use it as a resource in governing any future posts and activities. If you are unsure about any communication or public posting you may want to publish in the future, please feel free to reach out to the MCSW office for guidance and clarification. We continue to be grateful for the wonderful and substantial work you are doing in your regions and look forward to the future for women and girls in the Commonwealth.

Yours sincerely,
