DECISION ON APPELLANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY DECISION AND THE CITY'S MOTION TO DISMISS

Overview

The Appellants in this case are all permanent civil service employees who work for the City of Boston (City). They are appealing their non-selection to the position of Highway Maintenance Foreman, a title in the "official service", arguing that the City violated civil service law and rules when they provisionally promoted three individuals who do not have civil service permanency. The City argues that the selections were made as provisional appointments, which does not require the selection of permanent civil service employees and, even if they were promotions, the three employees in question should be considered permanent since the Civil Service Commission has previously recognized labor service employees hired by the City after 1998 as such in the context of disciplinary appeals. A larger question regarding these appeals is whether all labor service employees hired by the City since 1998 are considered permanent or provisional employees. Central to answering that question is whether the process used by the City to make labor service appointments over the past twenty plus years violated civil service law and rules.

Procedural History

The Appellants filed their appeals with the Commission on September 10, 2010. A pre-hearing conference was held at the offices of the Commission on October 4, 2010. The state's Human Resources Division responded to my request for information, which was copied to both parties, on October 18, 2010. A status conference was then held on November 16, 2010. The Appellants filed a Motion for Summary Decision on January 10, 2011 and the City filed a Motion to Dismiss on February 4, 2011. A motion hearing was held on February 7, 2011. Per agreement of the parties, the City filed a Supplemental Motion to Dismiss on February 25, 2011.¹ HRD responded to my additional request for information, which was also copied to both parties, on August 5, 2011.

¹ On February 28, 2011, Appellant Victor Mejias filed a request for investigation, claiming that his working hours were changed in retaliation for filing an appeal with the Commission. That request for investigation will be docketed as a separate appeal and handled separately.

Applicable Law, Rules and Policies

Civil service jobs are divided into two categories, official service and labor service. The categories are based on the systems used to select job applicants.

Labor Service Appointments and Promotions

So called “labor service” positions are those jobs for which applicants do not have to take a competitive examination, and appointments are made on the basis of priority of registration. (See G.L. c. 31, §§ 1, 28-29 and Everett at footnote 4.)

G.L. c. 31, § 28, which pertains to labor service appointments, states in relevant part:

“... the names of persons who apply for employment in the labor service ... of the cities and towns shall be registered and placed, in the order of the dates on which they file their applications, on the registers for the titles for which they apply and qualify. The name of any such person shall remain on such register for not more than five years ... The names of veterans who apply for employment in the labor service shall be placed ... ahead of the names of all other persons.”

Section 19 of the Personnel Administration Rules (PAR.19), promulgated by HRD and approved by the Commission, contains the rules that apply to all labor service employees in cities and towns covered by the civil service law.²

PAR.19(2), which pertains to labor service appointments, states in relevant part:

“When positions are to be filled on a permanent or temporary basis in the labor service, the appointing authority shall make requisition to the administrator [HRD] ... [HRD] shall establish and maintain rosters for each departmental unit and by appropriate class containing the names, position titles and effective dates of employment of persons appointed to ... labor service positions ... in the service of a ... municipality after certification from labor service registers ...”

² PAR.20 contains rules for those cities and towns that have been “delegated” labor service functions by HRD. It appears that the City of Boston is the only civil service city or town in Massachusetts that has not been designated by HRD as a delegated community in regard to labor service functions.

PAR.19(2) also states that “selection and original appointments shall be made as provided in PAR.09.” PAR.09 contains the so-called “ $2n + 1$ ” formula which states that appointing authorities may appoint only from among the first $2n+1$ persons named in the “certification” willing to accept appointment, where the number of appointments is “ n ”. Applied to appointments in the labor service, appointing authorities can only appoint from among the first $2n+1$ [qualified] persons on the labor service register.

G.L. c. 31, § 29, which pertains to labor service promotions, states in relevant part:

“An appointing authority shall, prior to any request to [HRD] for approval of a promotional appointment of a permanent employee in the labor service to a higher title in such service; or for approval of a change in employment of a permanent employee within such service from one position to a temporary or permanent position which is not higher but which has requirements for appointment which are substantially dissimilar to those of the position from which the change is being made, post a promotional bulletin. Such bulletin shall be posted for a period of at least five working days where it can be seen by all employees eligible for such promotional appointment or change in employment. Any such request shall contain a statement that the posting requirements have been satisfied, indicating the date and location of the posting.”

PAR.19(5) pertains to labor service promotions and states in relevant part that”

“promotional appointments and changes of position under the provisions of M.G.L. c. 31, § 29 shall be made from among the same number of persons with the greatest length of service as the number specified in making appointment under PAR.09, provided that such persons possess the required qualifications and serve in eligible titles, as determined by [HRD]. “

Official Service Appointments and Promotions³

Openings in the so-called “official service” are filled on the basis of a competitive examination process. (See G.L. c. 31, §§ 1,6 inserted by St.1978, c. 393, § 11 and City of Everett v. Teamsters, Local 380, 18 Mass.App.Ct. 137,463 (1984).

³ It does not appear that Section 30 of Chapter 31, “promotional appointments from labor service to official service”, applies to the instant appeals.

In most circumstances, “provisional appointments or promotions” are used to fill non-public safety official service positions in Massachusetts, as there have been no examinations for such positions in many years.

In a series of recent decisions, the Commission has addressed the statutory requirements when making such provisional appointments or promotions. (See Kasprzak v. Department of Revenue, 18 MCSR 68 (2005), on reconsideration, 19 MCSR 34 (2006), on further reconsideration, 20 MCSR 628 (2007); Glazer v. Department of Revenue, 21 MCSR 51 (2007); Asiaf v. Department of Conservation and Recreation, 21 MCSR 23 (2008); Pollock and Medeiros v. Department of Mental Retardation, 22 MCSR 276 (2009); Pease v. Department of Revenue, 22 MCSR 284 (2009) & 22 MCSR 754 (2009); Poe v. Department of Revenue, 22 MCSR 287 (2009); Garfunkel v. Department of Revenue, 22 MCSR 291 (2009); Foster v. Department of Transitional Assistance, 23 MCSR 528; Heath v. Department of Transitional Assistance, 23 MCSR 548.)

In summary, these recent decisions provide the following framework when making provisional appointments and promotions:

- G.L.c.31, §15, concerning provisional promotions, permits a provisional promotion of a permanent civil service employee from the next lower title within the departmental unit of an agency, with the approval of the Personnel Administrator (HRD) if (a) there is no suitable eligible list; or (b) the list contains less than three names (a short list); or (c) the list consists of persons seeking an original appointment and the appointing authority requests that the position be filled by a departmental promotion (or by conducting a departmental promotional examination). In addition, the agency may make a provisional promotion skipping one or more grades in the departmental unit, provided that there is no qualified candidate in the next lower title and “sound and sufficient” reasons are submitted and approved by the administrator for making such an appointment.

- Under Section 15 of Chapter 31, only a “civil service employee” with permanency may be provisionally promoted, and once such employee is so promoted, she may be further provisionally promoted for “sound and sufficient reasons” to another higher title for which she may subsequently be qualified, provided there are no qualified permanent civil service employees in the next lower title
- Absent a clear judicial directive to the contrary, the Commission will not abrogate its recent decisions that allow appointing authorities sound discretion to post a vacancy as a provisional appointment (as opposed to a provisional promotion), unless the evidence suggests that an appointing authority is using the Section 12 provisional “appointment” process as a subterfuge for selection of provisional employee candidates who would not be eligible for provisional “promotion” over other equally qualified permanent employee candidates.
- When making provisional appointments to a title which is not the lowest title in the series, the Appointing Authority, under Section 12, is free to consider candidates other than permanent civil service employees, including external candidates and/or internal candidates in the next lower title who, through no fault of their own, have been unable to obtain permanency since there have been no examinations since they were hired.

Chapter 282 of the Acts of 1998

As a result of a special act of the legislature, the vast majority of civil service employees in the City were granted permanency, regardless of how they were hired (i.e. – official service v. labor service; permanent v. provisional). The Acts of 1998 states:

“Notwithstanding the provisions of any general or special law to the contrary, the personnel administrator [HRD] shall certify any active employee who served in a civil service position in the city of Boston as a provisional or provisional promotion employee for a period of at least six months immediately prior to January 1, 1998, to permanent civil service status in that position.

Role and Responsibilities of HRD

HRD has delegated labor service functions to all civil service cities and towns, except the City of Boston. Thus, HRD still maintains a roster for labor service positions in the City of Boston. HRD’s website contains the following instructions for individuals seeking to be appointed to labor service positions in the City of Boston:

City of Boston Labor Service Position Application Process

Applicants file a Boston Labor Service application at the Human Resources Division (HRD), or download a copy from the HRD website (Boston Labor Service Application).

Applicants are assigned a Labor Service eligible number by HRD.

Applicants receive written notification of their assigned eligible number.

Applicants’ names are placed on the labor service register in order of their labor service eligible number for five years from receipt of application in HRD. The applicant may request in-writing that their name remain on the list for an additional five years only.

The names of veterans appear at the top of the list in order of their eligible number.

Applicants may add job titles, for which they qualify, to their eligible number by letter.

Applicants are notified when their name is reached for certification.

Applicants must remember that it is very important to update their address in-writing when a change in address has taken place.

HRD’s website also contains an “Application for City of Boston Labor Service” that must be completed by applicants. Page 2 of the application lists various labor service job titles divided into three categories: 1) Labor Class (which do not require experience); 2)

Skilled Labor Class (which require 1 year of experience in related work in the past 10 years); and 3) Mechanic and Craftsman Class (which require 2 years of experience in related work in the past 10 years).⁴

Facts of the instant appeals

1. Appellant Victor Mejias is employed by the City as a Senior Highway Craftsman, a labor service title. He has held this position since 1987. It appears that he was first employed by the City in 1983.
2. Appellant Hector Mejias is also employed by the City as a Senior Highway Craftsman, a labor service title. He has held this position since 1997. It appears that this is the date he was first hired by the City.
3. Appellant Robert Johnson is employed by the City as a Highway Maintenance Inspector, an official civil service title. He has held this position since 1991. It appears that he was first employed by the City on or about 1983.
4. Appellant Steve Wise is also employed by the City as a Highway Maintenance Inspector, an official service title. He has held this position since 2001. It appears that he was first employed by the City on or about 1980.
5. While there may be a dispute regarding how and when they obtained permanency (i.e. – were they considered permanent when first hired as labor service employees or did they only become permanent as a result of the 1998 Special Act), there is no dispute that all of the Appellants are permanent civil service employees.
6. There appears to be no dispute that Hector Mejias and Victor Mejias are permanent labor service employees (Senior Highway Craftsman) and Robert Johnson is a permanent official service employee (Highway Inspector). Since it appears that Steve Wise has only held his official service position since 1991 (after the Special Act), it is unclear if he is a permanent official service employee or whether he has permanency in a former labor service title.

7. In 2010, the City posted job openings for Highway Maintenance Foreman, an official service title. This position supervises the Senior Highway Craftsmen.
8. There is no existing eligible list for the official service title of Highway Maintenance Foreman, as HRD has not administered an examination for this position for decades.
9. The City argues that these job openings were filled as provisional appointments. The Appellants argue that they were filled as provisional promotions.
10. There is no indication – at all – that the City posted or filled these positions as provisional appointments. On the contrary, the City’s “Notice of Selection” signed and dated September 2, 2010, states “SUBJECT: NOTICE OF SELECTION FOR PROVISIONAL PROMOTION”. I find that the job openings were filled by the City as provisional promotions.
11. All of the Appellants applied for the posted Highway Maintenance Foreman positions.
12. The City interviewed 33 candidates for 5 positions. All of the candidates were asked the same questions and all were rated based on: 1) Performance / experience; 2) Job knowledge; 3) Job skills; and 4) Interpersonal Skills.
13. The City provisionally promoted the five people who were ranked highest as a result of the interviews. Three of the individuals selected were City employees hired after 1998: Frederick Mycroft (1999); Joseph Ryan (2003); and Brian Cannon (2005).

14. Mr. Mycroft was first hired by the City in 1999 as a Heavy Equipment Operator, a labor service title. In 2000, he was selected as a Special Heavy Equipment Operator, which is also a labor service title.
15. Mr. Ryan was first hired by the City in 2003 as Heavy Equipment Operator. In 2004, he was selected as a Special Heavy Equipment Operator.
16. Mr. Cannon was first hired by the City in 2005 as a Motor Equipment Operator, a labor service title. In 2006, he was selected as a Heavy Equipment Operator (labor service). In 2008, he was selected as a Highway Maintenance Inspector, an official service title.
17. Mycroft, Ryan and Cannon, who were all initially appointed as labor service employees, were not selected from a labor service roster maintained by HRD. Rather, the City does not dispute that, as of the February 7, 2011 motion hearing, it had not asked HRD for a certification of candidates from the labor service roster in many years.
18. Rather, the City has apparently been using its own (non-civil service) process to hire individuals for labor service positions for many years.

Appellants' Argument

The Appellants argue that since Mycroft, Ryan and Cannon were not appointed to their labor service positions from a labor service roster, and since they were hired after 1988, they are not permanent civil service employees. Therefore, they can not be provisionally promoted to the official service position of Highway Maintenance Foreperson.

City's Argument

First, the City argues that the positions were posted and filled as provisional appointments, not promotions. For the reasons cited above, I have found differently. The positions were filled as provisional promotions.

Second, the City argues that, even though these individuals were not hired from a labor service roster, the Commission has previously treated other labor service employees in the City as permanent in the context of disciplinary appeals. Thus, the City argues that Mycroft, Cannon and Ryan should be considered permanent employees in the context of a provisional promotion.

In support of this second argument, the City cites 10 prior discipline appeals where the Commission “treated employees as permanent for purposes of Civil Service even though they were not made permanent through Chapter 282 of Acts of 1998.”

I have reviewed all 10 of these appeals:

- 3 of them were withdrawn by the Appellants and 2 were dismissed based on the Appellants’ failure to prosecute the appeal;

In regard to the remaining 5 appeals:

- In Hampton v. City of Boston, CSC Case No. D-05-430 (2006), the Commission dismissed the appeal for lack of jurisdiction based on the fact that Mr. Hampton was a provisional employee. (I sought, but never received, information from the City, regarding whether Mr. Hampton was employed as an official or labor service employee at the time of his discipline.)
- In Williams v. City Boston, CSC Case Nos. D-05-145 and D-05-272 (2007) (2 consolidated appeals), the Appellant was discharged by the City from his position as a “Laborer / Motor Equipment Operator”. The appeal was heard by a magistrate at the Division of Administrative Law Appeals (DALA). Finding 2 of that decision states that the Appellant “received a permanent appointment to position of laborer / motor equipment operator [labor service titles] on August 31, 2001.” Apparently, the broader issue, now before the Commission, of whether any labor service employee hired after 1998 can be considered permanent, was not addressed. Rather, the issue was not contested and the decision focused on whether there was just cause for the termination. (The magistrate, and the Commission found that there was just cause for the termination and denied the appeal.)
- In Crowley v. City of Boston, CSC Case Nos. D1-08-260 and D-09-192 (2011) (2 consolidated appeals), the Appellant was discharged by the City from his position as a “Parking Meter Operations Person” (a labor service title). As in Williams, it appears the issue of permanency was not contested and/or substantively addressed. Rather, the decision focused on whether there was just cause for the termination.

CONCLUSION

For many years, the City has failed to comply with civil service law and rules when hiring individuals for labor service positions. Instead of selecting individuals from a labor service roster maintained by HRD, the City has made such appointments through a non-civil service process. As a result, many of the individuals whose names appear on the rosters, including veterans who appear before all others, have not been considered for labor service positions in the City of Boston. Further, the civil service status of those who were hired into these titles (since 1988) through a non-civil service process is in question.

The issue is now before the Commission in the context of 5 provisional promotions made by the City to the official service position of Highway Maintenance Person. The Appellants, all of whom are permanent civil service employees, argue that 3 promoted individuals, who all appear to have been appointed to labor service positions through a non-civil service process after 1988, are not permanent civil service employees, and, therefore, are not eligible for the provisional promotions.

The City tried (unsuccessfully) to argue that the issue of permanency is moot as the vacancies were filled via provisional appointments (which do not require the selection of permanent civil service employees.) Since the vacancies were filled as provisional promotions, the issue is not moot. Thus, in the context of these appeals, the Commission must decide whether three of the individuals selected, all of whom were hired as labor service employees since 1988, were eligible for the provisional promotions.

Further, the Commission must now address the far broader issues of: 1) Why the City failed to comply with civil service law and rules regarding labor service appointments since at least 1988; and 2) whether any individual appointed to a labor service position since 1988 should be considered permanent. A decision on the latter has implications far beyond the instant appeals and will impact potentially hundreds of other City employees.

While the City argues that all appointments and promotions are made through a merit-based review and selection process, it has offered no explanation as to why it failed to comply with civil service and rules for many years regarding labor service appointments. Further, it appears that the City has not been subject to an audit by HRD during this time period, despite the fact that the City apparently went years without requisitioning names from the various labor service rosters maintained by HRD.

The issue of whether Mycroft, Cannon and Ryan were eligible for the provisional promotions is inextricable from the broader issue regarding the status of all City employees hired into labor service titles since 1988.

For all of the above reasons, the Commission hereby orders the following:

1. The City shall comply, forthwith, with all civil service law and rules regarding labor service appointments.
2. Within 180 days, but no sooner than 90 days, HRD shall conduct an audit to determine whether the City is complying with all civil service law and rules regarding labor service appointments, including the requisitioning of names from those labor service rosters maintained by HRD. The findings, conclusions and any recommendations from that audit shall be submitted to the Commission in a timely manner.
3. Within 180 days, the City shall submit to the Commission a proposed remedy to address the civil service status of any City employee appointed to a labor service position since July 1, 1997. The City shall consult with HRD and representatives of any appropriate bargaining units prior to submitting said proposed remedy to the Commission.
4. Upon submission of the proposed remedy, the Commission will conduct a public hearing and review the proposal prior to issuing any final decision regarding the status of these individuals.
5. The Commission's review of all of the above-referenced orders will be conducted pursuant to G.L. c. 31, § 2(a) under Docket No. I-11-267.

6. The Appellants' appeals under Docket Nos. G2-10-224, G2-10-225, G2-10-226 and G2-10-237 are hereby dismissed with an effective date of June 1, 2012. In the event that that Messrs. Mycroft, Cannon and Ryan are not deemed permanent civil service employees prior to May 1, 2012, the Commission will accept and allow a Motion to Revoke this Dismissal seeking to reinstate the Appellant's appeals for further consideration. No additional filing fee will be required. In the absence of a Motion to Revoke, the dismissal of these appeals shall become final for purposes of G.L.c.31, §44, on June 1, 2012,
