

Moderate Risk Training Providers

The Moderate Risk deleading course is an 8-hour course. It covers safety procedures like containment, cleanup, working safely, reinspection and regulatory requirements. Carpentry skills are not covered in the course. If you are considering doing moderate-risk deleading work, you should have carpentry skills. The course is offered across the state by private groups and organizations approved by CLPPP. The cost varies depending on the training provider. Once you are authorized to perform moderate-risk deleading, you are authorized to perform low-risk deleading, including encapsulation. Private providers generally charge between $100 - $200 for the training. Course schedules vary depending on demand. Some providers offer courses at least twice a month, including nights and weekends as well as in Spanish. After completing the course, CLPPP will send you a take-home exam. After passing your exam, you will receive a letter with your CLPPP authorization number. Professional contractors are not eligible for this course and should contact the Department of Labor Standards to learn about the training and licensing requirements.
