

WORKSHOP C QUESTIONS

QUESTION 1:

The City of Warrendale has a property in tax title consisting of five acres that is located, on one side, next to its elementary school that the City is seeking to replace, and on the other side, next to a City playground. The tax title property, located on a major thoroughfare, would be an ideal location on which to build a new elementary school to replace the existing one, while not interrupting the educational use of the existing elementary school, and to allow for the building of playing fields. The City is concerned, however, that if it were to proceed with tax title foreclosure procedures, a potentially lengthy process, a developer wishing to purchase the property from the owner at a high value would thwart the efforts of the City to attain the property for its desired public uses. Does the City have any options by which to achieve its goals? If so, how would the Collector handle the issue of pending outstanding taxes on the property?

The ordinance provided that the collector may credit to the account fees, charges and costs emanating through the tax title process. salary of the Tax Title Custodian from the Tax Title Collection Revolving Fund.
May he do so?

QUESTION 4:

Ben Smith has been holding a grudge against the Town of Aquino ever since the Town utilized eminent domain procedures to take a portion of his property to construct a water treatment plant. In escalating his dismay with the Town, he began appearing in person before the Office of the Collector of Taxes to pay his tax and water bills using coins, eventually burdening the office staff by paying all of his bills with pennies. The only way to process the coins was to have a staff member painstakingly count each of the coins brought by Mr. Smith and subsequently provide him with a receipt. The Town's Collector, wearying of the long lines that resulted from Mr. Smith's payment method, the physical demands placed upon her employees in carrying the coins, and the fear that Mr. Smith refuses to wear a mask, is seeking to establish a policy to prevent taxpayers from making any payment to the Town utilizing coins. May she do so?

QUESTION 6:

John Peters, the Town Administrator of Rustville, is seeking to utilize creative measures to bring economic development to the town. The town had, up until the 1950's been the regional manufacturer of factory machinery, and there were many mill complexes located in the town. Starting in the 1960's, factory production for such products began moving to the south, resulting in an industrial decline in the town. The town already owns several former derelict mill complexes through tax foreclosures, and Peters does not want the town to acquire any more of them. He has been approached by the owner of a mill complex that is not yet in the tax foreclosure process. Peters is seeking to attain a sale of this waterfront mill complex, which he thinks would spur a new owner to invest heavily in the emerging life sciences industry and build a much-needed hotel to serve the region. Peters thinks the Town's compromise of a substantial amount of property taxes and resulting re-development of the property will promote tourism and incentivize regional economic development. He is also considering asking Town Meeting for an appropriation to provide the owner with funds to spruce up the property to make it more marketable for private sector investment. May Peters do so?

This year, Morris has discovered that not only did Scary Town fail to install the sprinklers that he ordered in the intervening year, but he now found that Scary Town added a Haunted Maze in one of the antique farm buildings that comprised the complex. That building was likewise not equipped with sprinklers, contained no illuminated exit signs, and the materials used in the construction of the indoor maze were flame accelerants.
