MWRA Receives
Achievement of Excellence in Public
Procurement Award

The Purchasing Unit of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) recently received the Achievement of Excellence in Public Procurement Award from the National Purchasing Institute (NPI) and the National Association of Purchasing Management (NAPM). This annual award is earned by public or non-profit organizations that demonstrate excellence by the high score they earn in national judging against standardized criteria.

The MWRA’s Purchasing Unit was selected for overall excellence in purchasing, especially in the following areas:

- centralizing the MWRA purchasing functions;
- centralizing warehousing under the materials management program;
- automating requisition and purchase order issuance; and
- publication of a procurement manual.

In addition to meeting the above criteria, two additional factors aided the MWRA in receiving this award. The first was the achievement by the entire Purchasing Unit of certification in the Inspector General’s MCPPO program. The second was the implementation of a Purchasing Card Program.

Chapter 30B and
Construction Bid Law Reform
Legislation Update

The reporting time has been extended for both House Bill 83 and House Bill 84 until December 30, 1999. House Bill 83, if passed, would increase the current dollar thresholds for procurements made under M.G.L. c. 30B. House Bill 84, if passed, would reform the public construction laws by raising dollar thresholds for bidding requirements, strengthening the contractor prequalification system, introducing value engineering to save money on larger projects, and establishing training standards for public officials responsible for contract oversight. Both bills were heard on May 19, 1999 by the Joint Committee on State Administration. We will keep you updated of any change in the status of these bills.

Please consider voicing your support for these bills by calling your State Representative and Senator. The number to connect to your State Representative is (617) 722-2000. The number for the Senate Clerk’s Office, where you may obtain your State Senator’s number, is (617) 722-1276.

Drafting performance specifications for commercially available equipment is usually a good idea. Performance specifications state what a product must do, rather than using a brand name as a description. By stating your desired level of performance for a product, you clearly spell out what you need a product to do. You may also set out stringent quality requirements indicating your desired level of quality, so that any product which does not meet your desired level of quality may be rejected as nonresponsive.

When drafting specifications you may be tempted to use a brand name followed by the phrase “or equal,” in lieu of writing detailed specifications for your purchase. Although this method of specifying equipment may save you time at the beginning of the procurement process, it may cost you extra time and sometimes extra money at the conclusion of the procurement process. Many disputes arise from the use of brand name “or equal” specifications. One of the most common disputes occurs when a vendor and an awarding authority disagree as to whether the vendor’s product is actually equal. These disputes are understandable because most “or equal” specifications do not give vendors enough information about an awarding authority’s desired level of quality.

If you find it necessary to use “or equal” specifications, you should clearly spell out what features and qualities of the brand name specified must be equalled. Merely adding the term “or equal” to a brand name usually does not give bidders enough information about the equipment you are purchasing. Additionally, if there are features or qualities of the brand name specified that bidders do not have to meet, then you should list those features. You should also state in your invitation for bids that your jurisdiction reserves the right to determine whether alternate brands are truly equal to the brand specified.
Consumer Protection

Resources

As a local procurement officer, you should keep in mind that your jurisdiction is a consumer with the same rights and protections as any other consumer. The Federal Trade Commission Act and a state statute, M.G.L. c. 93A (referred to as the consumer protection law), prohibit unfair or deceptive acts and practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce.

These laws establish a duty of good faith and fair dealing in business transactions. The state statute was fashioned after the federal statute to apply to transactions conducted by and among Massachusetts businesses. The scope of these federal and state laws prohibiting unfair and deceptive business practices is broad and applies to contracts for both goods and services.

The state statute provides that any person who suffers a loss by any unfair method of competition or unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce may file suit. Lawsuits against offending businesses can be brought by a consumer, another business, or by the Massachusetts Attorney General. A successful consumer may be eligible to receive two or three times the amount of money that it actually lost, plus attorney’s fees.

Several sources, including the Federal Trade Commission Act, federal court opinions, federal regulations, and state regulations issued by the Attorney General detail specific business practices that are unfair and deceptive, and therefore illegal. These illegal practices include:

- false and deceptive advertising
- bait and switch schemes
- material misrepresentations
- product substitutions
- deceptive pricing schemes
- false representations that repairs were made
- false representations that a product is new or unused
- material underestimation of or mistakes about repair costs
- failure to disclose material facts
- “slamming” by telecommunications companies

Some unfair or deceptive acts or practices not only violate the consumer protection laws, but may also constitute breach of contract. For example, a seller’s failure to honor an express or implied warranty may be a breach of contract and, in some cases, may also violate M.G.L. c. 93A.

The U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has a toll-free consumer hotline at 1-877-FTC-HELP (1-877-382-4357). The hotline is open from 9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Hotline staff receive and record consumer complaints. The FTC logged over 60,000 consumer complaints last year. The FTC also publishes free brochures on many consumer issues. For more information, visit the FTC’s website at www.ftc.gov.

You may also contact the Consumer Protection Division of the Office of the Massachusetts Attorney General if you encounter businesses that engage in unfair or deceptive practices such as those listed above. The consumer protection hotline number is (617) 727-8400.

Another helpful state agency, the Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation, is charged with educating, informing, and protecting consumers. This Office publishes educational brochures, investigates consumer problems, and runs the state’s Lemon Law Program and Home Improvement Contractor Program. This Office’s website address is www.state.ma.us/consumer. Its toll-free consumer hotline is 1-888-283-3757.
