HEARING OFFICER’S DECISION

SUMMARY

1. The issue in this matter is whether the Commonwealth of Massachusetts/Commissioner of Administration and Finance (Commonwealth or Employer), acting through MassHealth (MassHealth), interfered with, restrained or coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed under Section 2 of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 150E (the Law) in violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law by: interrogating employees concerning their union activities, threatening employees with unspecified reprisals because they engaged in union activities, and surveilling employees while they conducted union meetings. Based on the record and for the reasons explained below, I find that the Commonwealth did not unlawfully interrogate employees concerning their union activities. The Commonwealth did, however, violate the Law by threatening employees with unspecified reprisals for engaging in union activities, and by surveilling employees while they conducted union meetings.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On March 30, 2016, Service Employees International Union, Local 509 (Union) filed a charge of prohibited practice with the Department of Labor Relations (DLR) alleging that the Commonwealth had violated Sections 10(a)(1), 10(a)(3) and 10(a)(5) of the Law. On November 9, 2016, a DLR Investigator conducted an in-person investigation of these allegations. On December 14, 2016, the Investigator issued a Complaint of Prohibited Practice and Partial Dismissal alleging that the Commonwealth had violated Section 10(a)(1) of the Law, and dismissing the 10(a)(3) and 10(a)(5) allegations. On December 19, 2016, the Commonwealth filed an Answer to the Complaint of the Prohibited Practice.

On October 5, 2017, I conducted a hearing during which the parties received a full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence. On December 15, 2017, the parties filed post-hearing briefs.

STIPULATIONS OF FACT

1. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is a public employer within the meaning of Section 1 of the Law.

---

1 Prior to the outset of the hearing, the Commonwealth requested the sequestration of witnesses. I granted the Commonwealth's request. The Commonwealth designated Ricardo Couto (Couto), a Labor Relations Specialist, as its essential representative, and he remained present throughout all witness testimony. The Commonwealth subsequently called Couto as a rebuttal witness, and I noted on the record that he had been present throughout the hearing.
2. Service Employees International Union, Local 509 is an employee organization within the meaning of Section 1 of the Law.

3. The Union is the exclusive statewide bargaining representative for certain employees employed in Unit 8 in the categories of Benefit Eligibility Review, Social Worker A/B/C and D.²

FINDINGS OF FACT

General Background

MassHealth is a state agency responsible for ensuring that all residents of Massachusetts have access to health care. Since December 7, 2015, Diane Pixley (Pixley) has been the Director of the Taunton MassHealth Enrollment Center (Taunton MEC). As the Director, Pixley is responsible for the day to day operations of the Taunton MEC, including personnel and labor relations issues. The primary function of the Taunton MEC is to provide walk-in and telephone services related to the health care enrollment of Massachusetts residents; certain administrative hearings also occur at the Taunton MEC.

The Union represents approximately sixty-five members at the Taunton MEC. Katherine Burgess (Burgess) is the Union’s Chief Steward at the Taunton MEC, and she is also a member of the Union’s Chapter Board. She has worked at the Taunton MEC as a BERS A/B for more than eleven years. Burgess’ primary job duty as a BERS A/B is to answer incoming phone calls. Jennifer Doe (Doe) is a Union employee and currently the Union’s Lead Internal Organizer. During the events at issue in this matter, she was a Union Field Representative responsible for all MassHealth facilities. Doe was a Field Representative for three and a half years.

²Per the Collective Bargaining Agreement, the correct job titles are Benefits Eligibility and Referral Social Worker (BERS) A/B, C and D.
The Taunton MEC

The Taunton MEC shares a building with several other state agencies, and occupies parts of the building’s first two floors. An elevator and stairs link these two floors. The first floor contains the health care reform unit; and also a public walk-in area, hearing rooms, a training room, and a staff lounge. On the second floor, a secure door separates a hallway, containing the elevator and restrooms, from the work area. The second floor work area contains a clerical unit, an intake unit, an integration unit and a community ongoing unit. Upon passing through the secure door from the hallway into the work area, the office of Assistant Director Jenny Duvall (Duvall), Room 200, is on the immediate left. Proceeding down the hallway away from the secure door, the next room on the left is a large conference room, Room 201. The employee break room is to the right, across from Room 201. Proceeding farther down the hallway away from the secure door, and immediately after Room 201 on the left, is Pixley’s corner officer, Room 202. Employee cubicles and storage rooms largely comprise the remainder of the second floor work area.

Throughout the day, Pixley frequently has occasion to walk about the Taunton MEC. She goes to Room 200 to speak with Duvall seven to ten times a day, and she uses the elevator three or four times a day to enter and exit the building and to check on 3The training room has windows that allow one to see into it from the work area if the blinds on the windows are not drawn. Burgess’ cubicle is directly across from the training room. When Burgess is sitting in her cubicle, she can see people walk by the area. Pixley walks by this area on occasion, but not often.

4The distance from Pixley’s office to the secure door is approximately twenty-five feet. Walking this distance takes Pixley no more than ten seconds.
the walk-in and staff areas on the first floor. She also goes to the second-floor breakroom two or three times a day.

Room 201

Two wooden doors access Room 201 from the hallway. These doors have windows that allow one to see into Room 201 from the hallway, and vice versa. A windowless door inside Room 201 also directly connects Room 201 with Room 202, Pixley's office. As of the date of the hearing, white noise machines, which drown out audible noise, had been installed outside both Room 201 and Room 202 for over six months; they were not installed during the events at issue.6

February 2016 Union Membership Meeting

The Union holds membership meetings at the Taunton MEC three to four times per year. So as not to disrupt operations, the Union splits the membership meeting into a first and second session, with some members attending the first session and other members attending the second session. Each session usually lasts an hour.

In February 2016, the Union held a membership meeting in Room 201. Burgess and Doe, along with between one-half and two-thirds of the Union's membership, attended the first session from 10:00 am to 11:00 am. During this first session, Pixley walked by Room 201 several times. Each time that Pixley walked by Room 201 she looked in at the membership meeting through the door windows and scanned the room 5These windows are approximately the size of two and a half pieces of 8 ½ x 11 paper.

6Prior to the installation of the white noise machines, Pixley could hear from her office the muffled conversations of people speaking in the conference room.

7Neither party introduced evidence to establish the date of the February membership meeting.
before moving on. At approximately 10:59 am, Pixley entered Room 201 unannounced and told the membership to return to work.\textsuperscript{8} Pixley then left Room 201 before returning within a minute to again tell the membership to return to work. The first membership session then adjourned.

March 9, 2016 Union Meetings Prior to Local Labor-Management Meeting

After receiving notice that the Union would meet with certain members on the morning of a March 9, 2016 local labor-management meeting (labor-management meeting), Pixley confirmed via email with the Union's President, Adrienne Weiss (Weiss), that the meeting would only include the integration unit and would not also include the intake unit. On March 9, 2016, prior to the labor-management meeting, Burgess met with the integration unit in the training room on the first floor of the Taunton MEC. The meeting lasted between forty-five minutes and one hour. During this meeting, Pixley walked by the training room two or three times. Pixley looked into the training room each time that she walked by the room. Pixley did not stop as she walked by the training room, and she did not enter the training room during the meeting.

While Burgess was meeting with the integration unit, Doe also met with some members of the intake unit. About ten minutes into Doe's meeting, Pixley arrived and asked to speak with Doe outside the room. Pixley explained to Doe that both units were not supposed to meet at the same time, and Doe's meeting then ended.

March 9, 2016 Local Labor-Management Meeting

\textsuperscript{8} Pixley testified, without specifying that she was talking about the February meeting, that she interrupted a Union meeting once because it "ran over," and she then returned to her office and "waited a little bit" before returning to the meeting again because "they were still meeting." I credit the more specific testimony of Burgess, which Doe generally corroborated.
On March 9, 2016, the parties held a labor-management meeting. Those present for the Union included: Doe, Burgess, Weiss, the Union’s Vice President Valerie Copeland, and stewards Antonio Rodrigues, Joann Araujo-Moniz and Jernice Diaz. Those present for local management included: Pixley, Duvall, and five team managers. Additionally, Couto and Donna Morrin (Morrin), also a Commonwealth Labor Relations Specialist, participated via conference call.

This was Pixley’s first local labor-management meeting as Director of the Taunton MEC. After consulting with her team managers about discussion topics for this meeting, Pixley wrote, by email to Weiss dated March 8, 2016:

These are some items the managers would like discussed tomorrow as well, please let me know if you have any questions:

- Professionalism in meetings
- Responses to issues/incidents prior to a complete investigation of the facts
- Manager directives
- Clarity on policies, procedures, union contract contents
- Allegations of management misconduct

In prior local labor-management meetings, management did not usually send agenda items to the Union. “Professionalism in meetings” and “Allegations of management misconduct” were items that Pixley wanted to discuss at the meeting. Pixley wanted to discuss “Professionalism in meetings” because of tension and communication challenges in the office that Pixley saw as a Union problem. Pixley and her managers felt that at various meetings they had been spoken to in a manner that was not respectful. Additionally, and most recently, Duval had informed Pixley that two staff members had been upset about how the staff members were treated at a Union meeting. Pixley considered the safety and security of the upset staff members to be at issue based upon what Duvall told her about the Union meeting. Pixley did not elaborate on or explain to the Union why she wanted to talk about these topics prior to the labor-management meeting.

The labor-management meeting lasted between sixty and ninety minutes. At least the first forty-five minutes were devoted to the Union’s agenda items, which did not include any of management’s agenda items. Approximately ten minutes into the labor-management meeting, Pixley indicated that she wanted to get to management’s agenda. Doe objected and the meeting continued through the conclusion of the Union’s agenda.

The discussion then shifted to management’s agenda, and Pixley took up the first topic, “Professionalism in meetings.” Pixley made some initial comments regarding the Union’s lack of professionalism in meetings, which Burgess understood to be directed at Burgess. Pixley then addressed with the Union the meeting that Duvall had told Pixley about involving the two upset staff members.\(^9\) Pixley stated that Duvall had made Pixley aware of behavior that Pixley had concerns about, and Pixley would be investigating that behavior because it was her duty and responsibility to ensure the safety and security of all the staff in the building. Pixley further expressed that she needed to investigate what occurred at the Union meeting where the staff were subjected to behavior that was potentially unsafe or unprofessional.\(^10\) \(^9\) Burgess testified that this occurring during discussion of the final topic, “Allegations of management misconduct.” Doe and Pixley testified that this occurred during the discussion of “Professionalism in meetings.” Also, Pixley testified that the meeting adjourned without reaching the final agenda item. The subject matter of the dispute pertains more to professionalism than management misconduct, and I therefore credit Doe and Pixley’s recollection over Burgess’ on this point.

\(^10\) Burgess identified the referenced Union meeting as the February membership meeting. Neither Doe nor Pixley identified Union meeting that was at issue.
At this point, Doe interjected, and an exchange between Doe and Pixley ensued, in which Doe asserted the protected status of Union meetings, and Pixley continued to assert what she saw as her responsibility to investigate to ensure the safety and security of the staff.\textsuperscript{11} At some point during this exchange between Doe and Pixley, Couto interjected and told Pixley that he would discuss the issue with her offline.\textsuperscript{12} The meeting then abruptly ended.

\textsuperscript{11} Although Pixley testified that she “indicated that my concern was not about the meeting, or the contents of the meeting, I was concerned about unprofessional behavior towards staff members,” there is no evidence in the record that Pixley ever articulated to the Union how that alleged unprofessional behavior constituted a potential threat to the safety and security of the staff. There is also no evidence that any formal complaint was filed with management over the conduct of any Union meeting.

\textsuperscript{12} Burgess testified that Doe asked Couto to intercede, and Couto then told Pixley they would talk about this issue later. Doe testified that Couto told Pixley “to stop,” and that Pixley then continued before Couto said they would “discuss it offline.” According to Doe, after Couto told Pixley they would discuss it later, Pixley continued to say “that some of the temporary workers came to her and were upset and she would be investigating that.” Pixley testified that Couto stated there would be no investigation, and they would talk after the meeting. Couto, who was not sequestered, and had difficulty remembering the basic details of this meeting on cross-examination, testified on direct examination that, “as testified today” he told Pixley “not to do that” and that they would talk “offline.” Upon further direct examination, Couto added that he “made a comment” to “everyone” that “no one was going to be investigating...anything that’s going on at the Union meetings.”

I do not find that Couto said that no investigation would occur. On direct examination, Couto, who was not sequestered, explicitly referred to prior testimony rather than testifying from his memory, and on cross-examination he testified to not remembering numerous basic details surrounding the meeting. Additionally, neither Burgess nor Doe testified to Couto making any such statement, and their testimony generally corroborates each other on this point, whereas the only testimony to corroborate Pixley on this point is Couto’s, which I find unreliable. Finally, as discussed infra, Couto had to later tell Pixley that she could not investigate the Union meeting, which he would not have needed to say to Pixley if he had already told her that no investigation would occur.
After the meeting ended, management left the room and the Union remained in the room to caucus. About two minutes later, Pixley returned, entered the room and attempted to continue the discussion with Doe.\textsuperscript{13} Doe told Pixley to leave and Pixley left the room. After the caucus ended, the membership returned to their desks and finished the workday.\textsuperscript{14}

At some point shortly after the meeting ended, Pixley spoke with Couto and Morrin on the telephone. During this conversation, Pixley again expressed concern about the Union's behavior during Union meetings. Couto and Morrin told her that she could take no action, that Union meetings were outside her jurisdiction, and to refer Union issues to Union representatives. They instructed Pixley to meet with her managers to make sure that the managers understood this directive. Pixley subsequently met with her managers and told them to refer staff to the Union if the staff raised issues that involved a Union meeting. Pixley did not subsequently tell any bargaining unit members that she would not investigate the Union meeting. Pixley did not investigate the Union meeting.

After the labor-management meeting, Doe left messages regarding the meeting with Morrin and Morrin's supervisor, but did not reach them. About four days after the labor-management meeting, Doe spoke with Couto and Morrin on the telephone about the labor-management meeting. During this conversation, Couto told Doe that "no \textsuperscript{13}Both Burgess and Doe testified that Pixley returned about two minutes after leaving. According to Doe, Pixley "started asking a question about the contract." Pixley testified that she did not recall the Union caucusing, and she did not recall returning to the room. I credit the more specific testimony of Burgess and Doe.

\textsuperscript{14}The record contains no evidence that during the labor-management meeting Pixley asked any questions about Union activity.
harm's been done other than the comment." Couto did not subsequently speak to any bargaining unit member about the incident.

October 4, 2016 Union Meeting

On October 4, 2016, Burgess met with a Union member in the first floor training room for approximately twenty minutes. During this meeting, Burgess saw Pixley stop outside the training room and stare in the window at Burgess and the Union member.
Pixley remained stopped outside the training room looking in at Burgess and the member for approximately thirty seconds.\(^{15}\)

A public employer violates Section 10(a)(1) of the Law when it engages in conduct that may reasonably be said to tend to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of their rights under Section 2 of the Law. Town of Bolton, 32 on the impact that the employer's conduct would have on a reasonable employee rather than the subjective impact of the employer’s conduct on the actual employee involved.

Quincy School Committee, 27 MLC 83, 91, MUP-1986, (December 29, 2000). Under this test, expressions of employer anger, criticism, and ridicule directed at an employee’s protected activities have been found sufficient to constitute interference, restraint, and coercion of the employee. Id. Even without a direct threat of adverse consequences, the CERB has found a violation when an employer makes disparaging remarks about an employee’s exercise of protected activities. March 9, 2016 Local Labor-Management Meeting

The Complaint alleges that the Commonwealth violated the Law when Pixley, at the labor-management meeting, interrogated employees about their Union activities and threatened employees with unspecified reprisals because they engaged in Union activities. I address each allegation in turn.

Interrogating Employees Regarding Union Activities

An employer who coercively interrogates employees about their union activities violates Section 10(a)(1) of the Law. Lawrence School Committee, 33 MLC 90, 99, MUP- 02-3631 (December 13, 2006) (citing Plymouth House of Correction, 4 MLC 1555, 1572, MUP-2234, 2429 (December 6, 1977)). Here, the record contains no evidence that Pixley interrogated any employee during the labor-management meeting. To interrogate, as that word is commonly understood, means to question formally or systematically.¹⁶ Neither Burgess nor Doe, the Union’s only witnesses, testified to Pixley asking any question about Union activities during the labor-management meeting. As there is no evidence in the record that during this meeting Pixley sought to elicit any information about any Union activity, she did not interrogate, let alone coercively interrogate, any employee about his or her Union activity. Accordingly, the Union has not here carried its burden of proof, and I dismiss this allegation.

Threatening Employees with Unspecified Reprisals

Pixley told the Union members during this meeting that she had been made aware of some behavior that she had concerns about, and that she would be investigating that behavior to ensure the safety and security of all staff in the building. Pixley also told the Union members that she needed to investigate what occurred at the Union meeting where the staff was subjected to behavior that was potentially unsafe or unprofessional. Section 2 of the Law protects lawful, concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining, in this case the conduct of a Union meeting, and the record contains no evidence that Pixley explained to the Union how any behavior potentially implicated the safety and security of all staff in the building.¹⁷

As Director of the Taunton MEC, Pixley is responsible for handling personnel issues, and I conclude that a reasonable employee under these circumstances would perceive Pixley's statements that she would be investigating staff behavior during a Union meeting to threaten adverse consequences for engaging in protected union activity. See Town of Dennis, 29 MLC 79, 83, MUP-01-2976 (October 10, 2002) (A remark that clearly ties adverse employment action to protected activity would tend to intimidate and discourage a reasonable employee); See also, Town of Bolton, 32 MLC at 26 (Letter containing threatening comments violates Section 10(a)(1) of the Law).

¹⁷Although concerted activity can lose its protected status if it is unlawful, violent, in breach of contract in certain circumstances, disruptive, or indefensibly disloyal to the employer, those facts are not here present. See, City of Haverhill, 8 MLC 1690, MUP-4204 (December 16, 1981).
Consequently, Pixley’s conduct may reasonably be said to tend to interfere with, restrain or coerce employees in the exercise of their Section 2 rights in violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law.

The Commonwealth argues that Pixley’s statements that she would investigate the Union meeting did not violate the Law because she made only one brief comment that did not derogate or ridicule the Union, and the context and tone of Pixley’s statement show that she was talking about the well-being of an employee, and not interference with the Union. Additionally, the Commonwealth argues, Couto immediately “rectified” any impression that an investigation would occur. For the following reasons, these arguments do not persuade me.

The brevity of chilling conduct does not excuse interference with rights guaranteed under Section 2 of the Law. Lawrence School Committee, 33 MLC at 100. Additionally, although comments that derogate or ridicule union activity are sufficient to find a violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law, they are not necessary to find a violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law. Athol-Royalston Regional School District, 26 MLC at 56 (“Even without direct threats of adverse consequences,” disparaging remarks may be unlawful (emphasis supplied)). Moreover, the CERB does not analyze the motivation behind the conduct. Town of Chelmsford, 8 MLC at 1916. Rather, the test remains whether the conduct may reasonably be said to interfere with, restrain or coerce employees in the exercise of their Section 2 rights. Groton-Dunstable Regional School Committee, 15 MLC at 1555. I conclude that a reasonable employee under the circumstances would perceive Pixley’s statements that she would investigate behavior that occurred at the Union meeting to threaten adverse consequences for engaging in Union activity.

Additionally, there is no merit to the Commonwealth’s argument that Couto “rectified” any violation that may have occurred. In Salem School Committee, 35 MLC 199, 217, MUP-04-4008 (April 14, 2009), the CERB determined that the respondent neither cured nor rendered moot an underlying prohibited practice when it settled a grievance, but did nothing to publicize its actions or to renounce future similar actions. Here, Couto did not overrule Pixley when she made the statement that she would investigate the Union meeting. Couto also did not assure the membership that Pixley would not investigate their conduct at the Union meeting. Thus, the Commonwealth did not cure, or “rectify,” the impression that Pixley’s threat to investigate created. Therefore, I find that the Commonwealth violated Section 10(a)(1) of the Law when Pixley threatened employees with unspecified reprisals for engaging in union activities.

Surveillance

Employer surveillance of union meetings violates Section 10(a)(1) of the Law. Plymouth County House of Correction, 4 MLC 1555, 1571-72, MUP-2234, 2429 (December 6, 1977). Additionally, creating the impression of surveillance is unlawful interference. Id., (citing CBS Records Division, 223 NLRB 709 (1976)). CBS Records Division held that creating the impression of surveillance was unlawful even though surveillance did not actually occur because of “the tendency of the conduct to affect the freedom to support or not support the Union.” Id. Here, the Union alleges that Pixley surveilled a Union meeting three times. I address each instance in turn.

February 2016
On an unidentified date in February 2016, Pixley walked by a Union meeting several times in the course of one hour and looked in the room through windows in the doors as she walked by the room without stopping. This Union meeting was occurring in a room adjacent to Pixley’s office, and when the meeting occurred the Commonwealth had not yet installed the white noise machines that it would later install in this vicinity. Pixley entered the Union meeting at approximately 10:59 am to disperse the meeting, and after briefly leaving the room she again returned to disperse the meeting. These facts persuade me that Pixley was monitoring the Union meeting before it ended, and this conduct would give a reasonable employee under the circumstances the impression that management is closely watching the Union’s meetings. Therefore, I conclude that Pixley’s conduct would tend to interfere with, restrain or coerce a reasonable employee in the exercise of his or her Section 2 rights in violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law.

March 9, 2016

Conversely, the evidence does not establish that Pixley violated the Law on the morning of March 9, 2016, prior to the labor-management meeting. Confusion surrounded which unit was meeting, and the Union met with two groups at the same time in contravention of its previous agreement. Pixley walked by Burgess’ Union meeting and looked in, but did not enter the meeting room. Pixley’s conduct in holding the Union to its agreement relates to the Employer’s legitimate operational concerns, and under the circumstances I do not find that it would interfere with a reasonable employee exercising his or her Section 2 rights.

October 2016
On October 4, 2016, Burgess met with a Union member in the first floor training room. During that meeting, Pixley stopped outside the room and stared through the window into the room at Burgess and the member. The undisputed evidence showed that Pixley did not often visit this area of the first floor. Additionally, this incident occurred after Pixley told the Union stewards, including Burgess, at the labor-management meeting that she would investigate a Union meeting. The Commonwealth did not present any evidence to explain Pixley’s presence outside this Union meeting. The evidence again establishes that Pixley was closely monitoring protected Union activity. Accordingly, I conclude that this conduct would tend to interfere with a reasonable employee in Burgess’ position exercising her Section 2 rights, in violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law.

CONCLUSION

The Commonwealth, acting through MassHealth, did not unlawfully interrogate employees about their Union activities. The Commonwealth did interfere with, restrain or coerce its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed under Section 2 of the Law in violation of Section 10(a)(1) of the Law when Pixley: 1) threatened employees on March 9, 2016 with unspecified reprisals because they engaged in Union activities; and 2) surveilled employees while they conducted Union meetings in February and October of 2016.

ORDER

WHEREFORE, based upon the foregoing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Commonwealth shall:

1. Cease and desist from:
a. Threatening employees with unspecified reprisals for engaging in Union activity.

b. Surveilling employees at Union meetings.

c. In any like manner, interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of any right guaranteed under the Law.

2. Take the following affirmative action that will effectuate the purposes of the Law:

   a. Immediately post signed copies of the attached Notice to Employees in all conspicuous places where members of the bargaining unit usually congregate and where notices to these employees are usually posted, including electronically if the Commonwealth customarily communicates to its employees via intranet or email, and maintain for a period of thirty (30) consecutive days thereafter; and

   b. Notify the DLR in writing of the steps taken to comply with this decision within ten days of receipt of the decision.

SO ORDERED.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF LABOR RELATIONS

JAMES SUNKENBERG, ESQ
HEARING OFFICER

APPEAL RIGHTS

The parties are advised of their right, pursuant to M.G.L. c.150E, Section 11 and 456
CMR 13.19, to request a review of this decision by the Commonwealth Employment Relations Board by filing a Notice of Appeal with the Executive Secretary of the Department of Labor Relations not later than ten days after receiving notice of this decision. If a Notice of Appeal is not filed within ten days, this decision shall become final and binding on the parties.
A hearing officer of the Massachusetts Department of Labor Relations has held that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts/Commissioner of Administration and Finance, acting through MassHealth, violated Section 10(a)(1) of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 150E (the Law) by interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights under Section 2 of the Law. The Employer posts this Notice to Employees in compliance with the hearing officer’s order.

Section 2 of the Law provides that public employees:

[S]hall have the right of self-organization and the right to form, join, or assist any employee organization for the purpose of bargaining collectively through representatives of their own choosing on questions of wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment, and to engage in lawful, concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, free from interference, restraint, or coercion. An employee shall have the right to refrain from any or all of such activities, except to the extent of making such payment of service fees to an exclusive representative as provided in section twelve.

WE WILL NOT threaten employees with unspecified reprisals for engaging in union activity.

WE WILL NOT surveil employees at union meetings.

WE WILL NOT in any like or similar manner interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of their rights protected under the Law.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
